FOR THE COURIER.

"THE FLOWERS ARE HEAVEN'S OWN GIFT." The world was made the hills stood fast, The streamlet tracked the vale: But nature wore a sombre hue,-No flowers bedecked the dale.

"Iwas rosy morn; -and on the grass, The pearly dew-drops hung; And in the bowers the feathered choir. Their sweetest chorus sung.

An angel from the heavenly plains, Was poised on golden wing, Above the hills and vales of earth, Where breathed the breath of Spring.

It was the godess Flora, sent To scatter o'er the earth The seed whi h grew in Paradise;-And thus the flowers had birth.

She breathed upon the fields, and shook From her wings the scented dew; And quick as thought, on every hill The heavenly beauties grew.

The birds astonished, ceased their songs; The beasts, confounded, gazed; Then, thrilling with notold delight, Deep thanks to God they raised.

The following beautiful lines are said to have originally appeared in the Entonian, a periodical started more than twenty years ago, by the boys of Eaton College,-For touth, tenderness and melody, they are incompara-

That limbs along in life's decline, Once bore a heart as young, as warm, As full of idle thoughts as mine? And each has had its dream of joy, His own unequall'd pure romance; Commencing when the blushing boy First thrills at lovely woman's glance.

And each could tell his rale of youth; Would think its scenes of love evince More passion, more unearthly truth, Than any tale before or since. Yes! they could tell of tender lays At midnight penned in classic shades, Of days more bright than modern days-And maids more fair than modern maids.

Of whispers in a willing ear, Of kisses on a blushing cheek; Each kiss, each whisper far too dear, Our modern lips to give or speak. Of passions too untimely crossed; Of passions slighted or hetrayed-Of kindred spirits early lost, And buds that blossom'd but to fide.

Of beaming eyes and tresses gay, Elastic form and noble brow, And forms that have all passed away, And left them what we see them now! And is it thus, is human love So very light and frail a thing? And must youth's brightest visious move Forever on Time's restless wing?

Must all the eves that still are bright, And all the lips that talk of bliss. And all the forms so fair to sight, Hereafter come to this? Then what are earth's best visions worth, If we at length must lose them thus? If all we value must on earth Ere long must fade away from us?

RELIGION.

BY WILLIAM LEGGETT.

Like snow that falls were waters glide, Earth's pleasure fade away; They melt in Time's destroying tide, And cold are while they stay! But joys that from Religion flow, Like stars that glide the night, Amid the darkest gloom of wo, Smile forth with sweetest light.

Religion's rays no clouds obscure; But o'er the Christain's soul It sheds a radiance calm and pure, Though tempests round him roll; His heart may break 'neath sorrow's stroke; But to its latest thrill. Like diamonds shining when they're broke, Religion lights it still!

We are pleased to learn that there is a high probability of the immediate location of the proposed new road between South Danvers and the easterly part of the town of Lynn. The advantages to be gained by the building of only about one mile of new road in this direction are so great, that it is surprising that it should have been suffered to rest so long. It will be remembered, when the Salem Turnpike was laid out, that it was then contemplated laying a road from the Eagle was then contemplated taying a road from the Eagle (where the monument now is) to the Tucker Farm; and it was said, that such a road would save more than a nile in going to Lynn. It is with pain we announce the death of this valuable citizen, in the meridian of his usefulness. Born in affluence, and educated with the advantages of our best literary institutions, it was his pe-culiar good fortune to have it in his power to be extensive-ly useful. And no man ever delighted more in doing good than Dr. Kittrege. Frank and open almost to a fault, no man ever sought his aid in vain. He was literally the poor man's friend, and the good man's counsellor His own noble spirit ever looked with disdain upon every prompted to a rerey co-opporation in every commend the enterprize. Diffident and modest in the estimate of his own ability, he never presumed to put himself in advance of his own proper position. of his own proper position in society. Reluctantly, at times be yielded to the wishes of his fellow citizens, in holding various offices of public trust and confidence; but always surrendered them cheerfully; finding more true sausfaction in his own domestic circle and the dignity of satisfaction in his own domestic circle and the dignity of a private station. His popularity was that which followed, and not that which was courted. For many years have we known him, and with confidence can we hear testimony to his integrity of life and uprightness of character. The premature death of such a man is indeed a public calamity. We learn that he waited the event with calm composure and true Christian resignation.—

notice, and on the lowest terms.

FOR THE COURIER.

BY A B. FLANDERS. I gazed upon a little mound. All rich with verdant green, 'Neath which a gentle flow'ret lay In balmy sleep serene. The flowers shed sweet fragrance round While others seem to pine; A simple stone was at the head And marked -- sweet Caroline.

That stone alone was all that marked The sleeper's resting place, And on that stone no other word But "Car: ine" was traced. As if that name alone sufficed To prove she once did twine Like ivy round the castle's wall. That name, -sweet Caroline.

Calm be her silent resting place, Beneath those rural shades, "Till the trumpet's sound shall call ber forth Where beauty never fades, Then bloom ye flowers, bestrew her tomb With fragrance sweet, divine-While birds shall tune their native songs And sing, sweet Caroline.

HOME AND FRIENDS. Oh there's a power to make each hour. As sweet as heaven designed it, Nor need we roam to bring it home. Though few there are to find it! We seek too high for things close by, And lose what nature found us; For life hath here no charms so dear, As home and friends around us.

We oft destroy the present joy. For future hopes—and praise them; While flowers as sweet bloom at our feet, If we'd but stoop to raise them! For things afar, still sweeter are When youth's bright spell hath bound us; But soon we are taught that earth has nought Like home and Friends around us.

The friends that speed in time of need, When home's last reed is shaken, To show us still, let come what will, We are not quite forsaken; Though all are right-if but the light From Friendship's altar crown'd us, Twould prove the bliss of earth was this-Our Home and Friends around us.

At a very short distance from the spot selected for the Depot, and at the foot of Munjoy Hill, is a large brick Foundery going up and nearly completed.

A PIG IN THE SOUP.

A Foreign Correspondent of the N Y. Evangelist tells the amusing anecdote which follows.

One bean iful day we were sailing briskly, not far from the Straits of Gibraltar. All the passengers were well that day and in remarkably fine spirits. Our appetites were in a very active condition, and we looked forward to dinner with a most unintellectual eagerness. The time came and we went to the table, delighted with the prospect before us. In the centre was an immense turteen of soup, and its contents sent up a refreshing odor. We were soon scated, and preparing to partake of it, when alas! for the expectations of such earthly good! The skylight above the table had been left open for the sake of ventilation. Unfortunately, at the same moment, some of the live stock of the ship were exercising upon the deck, and one of their number, a stout little pig, making a misstep, dropped plump into our soup! Imagine the scene. The poor animal had never been taught the usages of polite society, and seemed by no neans disposed to relish this introduction. His sudden appearance sent the already full contents of the dish in every direction. Not a face or dre-s was left unvisited by the mixture. Our captain's son being nearest, reeived the fullest share, and you can Judge of his figure when I tell you that not only streams of the liquid cours, ed down his face, but that his full whiskers were wel carnished with the bits of potatoe &c. with which the soup was filled. The most ridiculous object, however, was the unwitting occasion of this scene. His hot bath did not seem at all to his taste. He plunged and turned making the most extraordinary sound that ever issued from any of his race, and before any of us had recovered enough to aid him, he was out of the tub! True to his nature, he was no sooner free than he began to indeninify himself for this external application, by feasing upon the fragments scattered profusedly around. And we aughed, of coarse, though not without a degree of vexqu tion at our loss. The table was cleared, we went off wish our faces, and the next day the pig made our dine

FOR THE COURIER. OUR SCHOOLS.

To our Common Schools we owe our National prosperity. Free alike for rich and poor, and fostered by the wisdom of our wisest and best men, they furnish an almost sure guarantee that our sons and daughters shall grow up a wise and virtuous community.

The foreigner who travels through our States, struck with the mental and moral superiority of New England over the South und West, and even the old and met the inn-keeper, who, entering fully with his populous regions of the Middle States, in pure and deep virtuous principle, universally developed, fall far below the "Land of the Pilgrims,"-and if he be unacquainted with our School System, he will look in vain among the natural advantages of these respective communities for the cause, and fail to be satisfied. But let some intelligent person spend but a single half hour in explaining to him the difference in our Educational System, and he will no longer wonder,-the reason for our pulous care examined the broken limb, prepared his thrift and unexampled prosperity would be at once ap-

I was led to these reflections, Mr. Editor, by seeing ed for public instruction the amount of three dollars per cholar for all between the ages of four and sixteen,-Was this sum so wonderfully generous, that it must needs go out to the world, or was it a comment upon our money-saving propensities? Is it so very flittering to us as a town, runking about the thirteenth in the State in point of valuation, to be thus held up to the Town Rooms, on Wednesday evening, the following public, or rather dropt down about the fifrieth in p in of generosity? For myself I must say that I lookek upon the paragraph alluded to as wonderful and interesting only as it showed to those towns whose good deeds and noble generosity are a "praise among all people" that there are those, even in this age of light, this day of improvement, who love the "strong box" morthan the youth whose weal or woe they command.

More trouble is brewing in Switzerland.

The portuguese Ministry have resigned.

The Queen of Spain ank her husband are still at variance.

The French Duchess Praslin had been murdered by her husband, who immediately committed suicide.—

These twin murders caused a great sensation in Paris.

The cause was said to be a reproach from the Duchess as to his conduct as a husband. The Duchess was as to his conduct as a husband. The Duchess was soundered at guidnight with a dagger.

Poetrn.

The following stanzas, composed by Mr. ROBERT ROGERS, of Cambridge, was sung at the meeting of the former pupils of NEHEMIAH CLEAVELAND, Esq., at Dummer Academy, yesterday:-

STANZAS. AIR .-- AULD LANG SYNE. Why have we come with mirth and song And pleasant greetings here? Why send we back an eager gaze To some long buried year? Our hearts, yet quickened by the flame They caught from Learning's shrine. Have drawn us to this sacred spot With dreams of Auld Lang Syne.

We come to grasp each brother's hand So fondly grasped before; To find new friendship starting up On Youth's forsaken shore. We come to seek a favorite home. Where memor es remain With a radiant charm to make us all Gay school-boys once again.

And more than this, we leave behind The wearmess of life, Its frequent, strange vicissitudes, Its serrow and its strife, That we may turn to one, who led Us gently on the way Whose brightest promise might have been The welcome of to-day.

Our sports beneath those ancient elms Are noted over now: The wind that swept those murmuring leaves Plays coo! on every brow; The lonely lane, the haunted house, The deep, dark, witching glen, The river side, the poth to church Rise vividly as then.

And these old rooms!-who would not smile To hear of many a freak Our idle brains here conjured up, If walls could only sneak? But stay! a soberer thought belongs To such a time worn place; Our sires, our comrades-where are thev. Who here begun their race?

Brothers! we seem a broken band, But the dead are with us yet: They come and watch our festive rites; Shall we alone forget? No! while a tree on yonder green Waves o'er the tu:f they trod, Proud lips shall tell their varied worth-Gone to the rest of God.

Still let the past present its charm To gild the future hour. As the beauty of the opening bud Foreshows the perfect flower! Our path of duty lies before Straight from this holy shrine. Whence we have gathered brilliant hopes In the dreams of Auld Lang Syne.

"NO NIGHT BUT HATH ITS MORN." BY D. C. CAMPBELL.

There are times of deepest sorrow, When the heart feels lone and sad, Times when memory's spell of magic Have in gloom the spirit clad, Would'st thou have a wand all potent, To illume life's deepest night? This the thought that e'er in nature Darkest hours precede the light.

When the world, cold, dark and selfish, Frowns upon the feeble flame, Lighted by the torch of genius, Worth has kindled round thy name. When thy fondest hopes are blighted, And thy dearest prospects fade, Think, O lone one, scorned and slighted, Sunshine ever follows shade.

A drunken fellow recovering from a dangerou illness, was asked wether he had not been afraid of meeting his God. 'No,' said he, 'I was only afeard o' 'tother chap.'

They had reduced water. She immediately went the weather side of this rock. In two hours more she had knocked off her rudder, broke her pintles, &c., with four feet of water in her hold. The boats were got ready, and some bread and water put into them, the officers fearing that a heavy roller with a full tide might come in and open the ship. At daylight the lower hold was full of water, and land was seen about four miles distant. The captain then went on shore to ascertain his position, and what were the chances of rescue. It was a low, sand Island, about three miles in circumference, without a tree or shrub upon its whole surface, and surrounded by shoals, rocks, and coral reefs, exte ding on one side twenty-five miles out Upon returning to the ship, he ordered the masts cut away, and began to get up water from the hold .-They took out the chronometer, various instruments of navigation, charts, &c., with some bedding, and put them into a boat. In addition to this, the master, already in contemplation of building a vessel out of the wreck, as the only means of escape from this desert island, got up 1000 feet of pitch-pine plank. All these things were raised upon deck and left there with a view to take them on shore the next day. About sun down all hands proceeded in two boats to the shore to pass the night. Just after they landed, they saw their ship full over to the sea and to the windward; and discovered the next morning that everything raised the previous day, but one cask of bread, was washed overboard and lost. She lay upon a shelving rock, and in falling over slipped into deep water, so that all but about three feet below battens to the deck, they secured a foothold, and saved in eleven days came in sight of the island. They now be. now enjoy. from between decks three or four light spars, and hooked up from under water a coil or two of rigging, and one or two sails, with an eye to the future vessel. That day the mate and one seamen were left on shore to search for water. They dug for it, and at first found it very brackish, but afterward in the centre of the island, they found it tolerable. The spars were landed that evening. All the next day was passad in breaking up the ship's solid, outside timbers, a few peices from the bow, and clearing away the rigging in order to tow the masts which had been cut away, ashore. It now became necessary, as they had saved very little provisions, to begin to work in the lower hold, which was deep under water, to obtain them. There were six Sou h Sea Islanders on board, and two of them are divers. The master bargained with them to dive and book on to anything they could reach, with the promise of one cask in every hundred recovered, in addition to their wages and that they should be paid on their arrival at Oahu. The divers went down first in the after hatchway, remaining incredible periods under water, and fastened upon one cask after another. The crew each time hoisted away, but could start nothing. They then began to cut a hole through between decks near the cabin gangway. The lower deck was four feet under water, but they also cut a passage through this. Their on'y instrument for this work was a single boat spade, like that which they burl at whales. They passed this tool from hand to hand for thirty-six hours, employing nearly the whole crew, and keeping the instrument in motion; and at the end of that time had only cut a hole, large enough for the passage of a cask. This being done, in the course of five subsequent days they removed, by constant application, some two or three casks of bread, 30 barrels salt provisions, and 200 casks of oil. Subsequently, with the same instrument and persevering toil, they cut four other holes which was left floating between lecks that it might be ged a derrick over the main hatch, hoisted out the casks. and rolled them overboard, after being becketed, that is. loops of rope run under their hoops, through which a line was passed to tow them after a boat. In pleasant weather they could take but one raft of from six to twelve barrels to the shore in one day. The beach was extract. soft, like quicksand, and they were obliged to pave the beach with plank for a hundred feet, and roll the casks up this floor from the water, with great difficulty. The 1400 barrels oil and some povisions were thus landed.

strands of a steam cable. For sails they made over the feet beam. They got her upon the ways, and began their effort to launch her in the morning. The soft beach nearly rendered all their efforts fruitiess. Every means was applied to faciliate the launch, but in vain, until late in the afterneon, when, with extraordinary iffort they forced the schooner into the water, and, with reference to their situation named her THE HOPE .-Immediately on entering the water, she went over plankshear to the water. Additional ballast was taken to a large amount, but it did not right her. In putting water on board, nowever, she again went over planksheare to the water, of the vessel, that they received their water and provisions on board. With this cargo she seemed to be sufficiently still, and the captain with his crew, leaving eleven men on the island, to take care of the oil, with a promise of his speedy return, embarked the same night, and sailed the next morning, after nearly five months passed under a torrid san, and with incessant toil, upon this desolate island. In the course of twenty-six days they succeeded in getting all the oil on board with severe labor, and often at imminent hazard. On one occasion a new slupwreck had almost prostrated all their hopes, and rendered their labors vain. After all the cargo was on board, the brig remained wind-bound eight days, and was once near being wrecked in a gale: but was saved by her anchors bringing up against a coral bed. When the son was smooth they could see the rocks below them, and the coral reefs on every side through the clear water .-These reefs ran up in cones nearly the surface of the sea unless in sounding they chanced to drop the lead upon the summits they deemed the anchorage safe, though Onhu, and on the 15th, discovered off their larboard vegetables, have been produced by similar means. quarter, the breakers falling over a reef, near which they had unconsciously passed the night, in approaching the same p ant as the wild celery on the borders of the riv-t island. APPEARED TO A FAMILY IN BOSTON.

The Boston Chronotype relates the following: About five weeks since, a family residing at the West End, was very much annoyed by strange and disagreeable noises, which occurred occasionally at different hours of the night, but especially at the solemn hour of midnight. For a time those noises consisted only of kitchens, cradles, clothes-horses, and other indispensable articles of household furniture, all joining in exewith regard to the movements of its neighbor.

Such strange proceedings of course convinced the floor rose the ghastly form of a young girl in a winding-

MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE.

MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE.

The subscriber has been appointed agent or Danvers and vicinity, of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company. This Company is formed upon the surest foun dation. Its rates are based upon the latest and hest observations of the decrements of life, according to the expeience of the oldest of the English Companie. It is the most carefully managed of any of the kind in the country, and has been thus far remarkably successful.

Since commencing, February 1st, 1844, to April 1st, 1846, has issued 936 policies.

The amounts from 200 to $10,000 each.

Net fund accumulated (owing to the favorable turn of risks thus far) $89,500 besides guarantee capital.

Sarplus to be refunded to members at the end of every five years from December, 1543.

Diet os—Willard Phillips, Robert Hooper, William Parsons, Charles P. Curtis, Francis C. Lowell, James Read George W. Kuhn, William W. Stone, R. B. Forbes Peter Wainwright, Thomas A. Dexter, Otis Tuffs.

Pesident—Willard Phillips. Sec'y—Jonathan Amory.
A person in his thritieth year in order to secure one hundred dollars to his family at his decease, pays annually, during his life, $2 28; or be pays $22 80 to insure $1000.

Any one in the 24th year of his age, who needs a credit of $500 for three years, to begin business, where the only obstacle to his obtaining the credit is the uncertainty of life, may obtain the same by paying annually, for that period, $5. 16. Or if he needs $5,000, he gets the credit by life, may obtain the same by paying annually, for that period, $5. 15. Or if he needs $5,000, he gets the credit by paying annually, 51,50.

A creditor may frequently give himself additional security for his debt by insuring his debtor's life. One, while he is solvent, may secure a provision for his family on his decease, though he may die insolvent. Life insurance is better appreciated by the community with every day, and it cannot be long before its benefits will be as generally acknowledged as those of fire insurance are now.

Poetrn.

From the Haverhill Gazette. THE MOSQUITOE'S SONG. In vain you spread the net so white, And creep to bed so fast, I still will hold my feast to-night, And blow my midnight blast; One little chink beside the screen, Thoughtless you did not close; My ghost-like form can glide between, And perch upon your nose.

I've come from where a merchant slept, Who mourned how profits fell; Oh! softly to his skin I crept, And bled the cheater well. A foolish boy, that fished all day, Snored long and loud at night, And while he dreamed of finny prey, I let him have a bite.

I've tasted too your Lucy's cheek, And envied not the bee; A cherub child lay still and meek His blood was pure to me. My meagre form and hungry breast Would fatten now on you, And gendly on your face I'll rest, As falls the evening dew.

Within my thread-like tube I hold A poison sure and fine, Like famous Hannibal of old To wreak this will of mine; And when on skins like yours my rage, By feeding, stronger grows, With Punic arder I engage To spoil a Roman nose!

Ah! do not let my name be cursed! I drink as drunkards do: They peril life to quench their thirst, And madly I quaff too. Music at night is called so sweet-My serenade was long; Then do not grudge the only treat I ask you for my song.

'Reason, madam,' rejoined Mr. Strap, with a magis terial wave of the hand.

'Reason may do well enough for some,' said Mrs. Gosling, shaking her head, doubtfully.

It will do for all, madam, if properly applied. We are created with reason, we are not brutes. We arewe are—that is—,

"Certainly,' said Mrs. Gosling. 'I shall hereafter conduct my school on an entirely new system,' said Mr. Strap; 'I shan't have a rod in it. I shall make my boys love me, respect my kind intentions, bow to my reason, and obey me for their own good.'

What do you charge a year?' asked Mrs. Gosling.
'Two hundred dollars; and each boy to bring a silver 'And you never flog ?' Never, madam. When shall he come?"

'When you please.'

'Send him to-morrow.' 'I will,' said Mrs. Gosling.'

And come you and see him this day four The next day Master James Gosling, with two suits

Four of his front teeth had been knocked out in fighting. He bit his nails half way down, so that you could not look at them without setting your teeth on edge. His hands were covered with warts, and he had a shrill, cracked voice. Jim was a sad fellow, and one would think, from the number of whippings he had received, must have led but a sad life of it. It appeared, however, that he had accommodated himself to his situation, and that he lived with the head of a pumpkin and eyes as large as tea- bor, and on the point of sailing for England. amid his multifarious flagellations almost unburt, like a cuns. salamander in the fire. He had been literally whipped through life, and had become hardened to it, soul and body, as a camel's knees to the sand; and though he screamed and kicked from mere habit, you might see him, two minutes after one of these skin-flying operations, with a smile of unclouded comfort on his face, or careless mirth, eating a piece of bread and butter, or playing marbles, or numble-the-peg, with the first scarameuch he met. He had been injured, poor fellow, to all the forms and varieties of beating. Now it was a sudden whack on the ear, now a dozen slaps on the palm with a flat ruler—now a smart rap on the knuc-"Instruct," said Mr. Strap, 'on an entire new prin- kles-now a cuff, and now a kick. REMARKABLE ESCAPE,

The following extract from Cottle's Reminiscences of Coleridge will be read with interest not only as a striking incident in the life of a great English Poet and Philosopher, but as a new illustration of Yankee shr wdness and American sympathy with the oppressed and the afflicted in any part of the world.

Shortly after Mr. Coleridge had arrived in this city, he attracted some n tice among the literati, as an English 'Man of Letters.' Cardinal Fesch; in particular, was civil, and sought his company; but that which was more remarkable, Jerome Bonaparte was then a resident of Rome, and Mr C.'s reputation becoming known to him, doubtless, among enemies. I wish to show that you are he sent for him, and after showing him his palace, picnot so. We are all your friends. If you do wrong, you tures &c., thus generously addressed him: Sir I have sent for you to give you a little candid advice. He continued, giving him his address, 'You come to my house tomorrow early, when I will provide you with a jacket and trowsers, and you shall follow me & the ship with a basket of vegetables ' In short, thus cecontred, he did follow the captain o the ship the next morning; and in three hours fairly sailed out of Leghorn harbor, triumphant on his course to England! As soon as the ship had 'cleared port, Mr Coleridge hastened down to the cabin, and cried, 'My dear captain, tell me how you obtained my passport ?" It is gratifying to add that this benevolent little-scr . pulous captain refused to accept any thing from Mr C. for his passage to England; and behaved in many respects with the some uniform kindness. During the voyage, Mr Coleridge told me he was attacked with a dangerous illness, when he thought he should have died but for the 'good captain," who attended him with the what the captain was going to swear, whatever the consequences might have been, he would have prevented

IMPORTANT TO TEACHERS, —AND — SCHOOL COMMITTEES.
NEW SER ES OF READIN 1 BOOKS.

The Second Book, or leavitt's Easy lessons, is a work which has been so universally approved by the best Teachers in New England for 20 years past that no further recommendation is needed. This is substantially the same work, with a new Introduction. In its external apearance, however, it is very unlike its predecessors. The present edition is printed from new type on superior paper, and is elegantly bound in embossed 180 pages, 18mo.

The Purd Reader, is of the same general character as transaction of such other business as may come before them, will be held at the Bank, on WEDNESDAY, October 6 h, at 9 o'clock, A M.

The Third Reader, is of the same general character as the suspensions, but more advanced, intended for older scholars. The sprightly and attractive style and spirit of the Second Book runs through the Third. Great care has been taken in the Selection of peices, to get such as are calculated to interest the youthful mind, behaving that it is next to impossable to teach a child to read well from heavy, dul! prosy, uninteresting Text Book. This volume is 12mo of 240 pages, printed and bound in the Best manner.

THE members of the D. M. F. I. Cor are notified that their Annual Meeting for the choice of Directors, and the transaction of such other husiness as may regularly come before them, will be held at the room of the Danvers Bank, on MONDAY, October 4th, at 7 o'clock, P.M. Per order.

Danvers, Sept 18, 1817.

The Fourth Reader is intended no the Common Schools and contains peices of a still higher of character than those in the praceeding books. The Author has studiously avoided the introduction into this volume of extracts from elaborate Essays, Speeches, Dissertations, &c., &c., and hasaimed to meet the swants of the Scholar in the School room. He has selected and arranged such peices as he believes are calculated to arrouse and inspirit a school, and make good readers, and or source of sterling character, and or Wanted. Wanted.

DR. J. A. ROBINSON.

From Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston,
Having had occasion to observe, that some persons afdicted with Hernia, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the pecultarities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. F. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath.—
After some months of observation of his work, I am satisfied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of these instruments, and invagious in accommodat. OULD respectfully give notice that he has removed from his old stand, oposite the City Hall, to No 20 Washington street, recently occupied by A E. Phillips, where he is ready to perform all operation in Dentistry, in a most thorough and work-manlike manner
His experience and success it inserting whole sets either by atmospheric pressure or springs, enables him to furnish them at rates which cannot iail to suit those in wantture of these instruments, and ingenious in accommodating them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel myself called upon to recommend him to my professional brethren, and to the public, as a purson well fut to their wants in regard to these important articles.

Poetrn.

THE BEREAVED. BY AMELIA.

The moon within our casement beams. Our blue eyed babe hath dropt to sleep, And I have left it to its dreams, Amid the shadows deep. To muse beside the silver tide Whose waves are rippling at thy side.

It is a still and lovely spot Where they have laid thee down to rest. The white rose and forget-me-not Bloom sweetly on thy breast; And birds, and streams with liquid lull, Have made the stillness beautiful.

And softly through the forest-bars Light, lovely shapes, on glossy plumes, Float ever in, like winged stars, Amid the purpling glooms; Their sweet songs, borne from tree to tree Th ill the light leaves-with melody.

Alas! the very path I trace, In happier hours, thy footsteps made; This spot was once thy resting place, Within the silent shade; Thy white hand trained the fragrant bough That drops its blossom o'er me now.

*Twas here at eve we used to rove; Twas here I breathed my whispered vows, And scaled them on thy lips, my love, Beneath the apple boughs; Our hearts had melted into one; But Death undid what Love had done.

Alas! too deep a weight of thought Had filled my heart in youth's sweet hour, As fleeting passion-flower, Unfolding 'neath a southern sky, To blossom soon, and soon to die.

Yet in these calm and blooming bowers I seem to see thee still; Thy breath seems floating o'er the flowers, Thy whisper on the hill; The clear, faint starlight, and the sea, Are whispering to my heart of thee.

No more thy smiles my heart rejoice; Yet still I start to meet thine eye, And call upon the low sweet voice That gives me no reply— And list within my silent door For the light foot that comes no more.

The Two-Penny Omnibus.

Yes, it is very true what Thomas Hood quietly seating herself in the farthest corner of the ve- says-or rather singshicle, blessed the first projector of Two-penny Oamibusses, and thought, in her simplicity, that he must have been a very good man indeed, to make so great a sacrifice in order that the poor might now and then afford a drive. 'But for that,' reflected the grateful Mary, 'I might have been walking home now, wet and tired, all the way to l'addington, and most likely increased my cough, which is bad enough as it is.'

And as she reasoned thus, the rain beat against the glass windows; and rattled down the roof of the Omnious, with that most selfishly comfortable sound which the rain always seems to have to those who are under

The conductor pulled up the collar of his coat, and pulled down the brim of his glazed bat, from which the drops rolled down in streams upon his shoulders; shaking himself every now and then, after the fashion of some uncouth water-dog. He had no need to exert his voice; the Omnibus was full in no time, and might have been filled twice over: it would have been, in fact, but for the stout opposition of several of the passengers who were already stifled with the heat and crowd, together with the necessity of having the windows up. There was one old gentleman, however, who took the conductor's part upon all occasions, and kept on declaring that there was room, and squeezing himself into the smallest possible space in order to accommodate some dripping passenger. He was ready to hand every one in-to take charge of, and pass forward children and parcels innumerable; and he even took one poor child up in his knee, where he fell asleep quite naturally, with his little head resting on the shoulder of his protector. The old philanthropist rubbed his hands; like Mary Hord, he blessed the projector of Two-penny Omnibuses. He felt that there were many around him who might not have been able to afford a sixpence, and must have got wet without them. Perhaps he could not have done so himself very well, for as the lamplight fell upon him, one might have observed that his loose black coat was much worn about the collar and cuffs, and looked as if the owner had grown strangely thin since it was originally bought; while his hat was decidedly shabby. But no one would have noticed this, or thought of looking beyond the broad, benevolent forehead, and cheerful, open countenance of the wearer. He thought what a cheap pleasure it would be to any one who was rich-and they need not have been so very rich to afford themselves the laxury-to pay for all, and especially the little pale gentle-looking girl in the corner. Mary caugh his glance, and his kind smile, and smiled also, without knowing why, and as naturally as if she had been acquainted with him all her life.

and the Omnibus conducter managed, from very site reasons, to make room for, was a young lady attired in the height of fashion, with a muslin dress that had no less than six flounces (for Mary counted them,) a delicate crape bonnet, and a magnificent bracelet on her arm, which glittered in the lamplight, and divided Mary's attention with the flounces. The servant who accompanied her to the Omnibus, bewildered by the rain and the increasing darkness, h d stopped the wrong vehicle, and Miss Clementine Wilmont found herself, for the first time in her life, in a Two-penny Omni-

She would have had recourse to her vinaignette, only that she had not room to put her hand in her pocke; and finally insisted she got a a refreshing current of air, and the benevolent ed by losing a valuable bracelet.' upon having the opposite window open, by which means old gentleman, who sat facing her, had the benefit of the rain. But he was not one to be easily put out, and he was pleased to think that, anyhow, it could not hurt the poor girl in the corner, whose hollow cough rang in his ears every time the Omnibus stopped.

'It serves me right,' though Miss Wilmot; 'I should have ordered the fly to call for me: but then who would theirs must be blind, or deat, or stupid? Not to be a come back with the how and recent it. All this took far less time for Mary to think than for in meek courage. But Miss Wilmot was young, and

But an Omnibus is a bad place in which to meditate. And now it has stopped, and several passengers got out, assisted by the benevolent old gentleman, who warre them that the steps are slippery, and wishes them good night. Presently afterwards he g is out himself, and Mary feels serry, and returns his kind benison with innocent warmth.

'Take care of yourself, little one!' said he, and get rid of that note cough as soon as you can.

Mary smiled, and replied that she wished she could and then the door banged to, and there was no one left but herself and Miss Wilmot, who began to shake out her offended flounces, and feel a little more comfortable.

Mary was the last to leave the Omnibus, and as she did so, she stumbled over something which proved to be the glittering bracelet she had so much admired. There was a few moment's delay while she waited for change out of her sixpence; and when she again sprang forward Miss Wilmot was out of sight. Perhaps she had taken another vehicle, for it still rained hard, or had some shelter in some shop; anyhow Mary sought for her up one street and down another in vain. She would have consulted with the Omnibus conductor, but when she got back he had driven off; and the girl returned at length, wet-footed, in spite of all her care, to her humble abode, taking the bracelet with her. It was, as we have said, a very handsome one, and proved an object of wonder and delight to the younger children. It speaks well for the honesty of that poor f mily, that no thought of keeping or selling it appears for an instant to have entered into their minds. Neither did they, in their simplicity, dream of advertising it, by which means the owner might have been discovered.-Mary said, that she was sure she should meet the young lady again some day, and that she should know her in a moment; or perhaps the benevolent old gentleman who had smiled and spoken so kindly, and would, she felt certain, advise her what was best to be done. While the prudent mother's cautions against benevolent old ar old gentleman of whom mention has before been

It was very unlikely that Mary Ilford would ever again encounter the owner of the bracelet; but nevertheless, unlikely things do sometimes happ in in real life as well as on the pages of the novelist-tru h having been rightly said to be stranger far than fiction. A f w weeks after the occurrence which we have just related Miss Wilmot was stopped in the Edgeware Road, by a tered Fancuil Hall, and glanced around upon the multilight at the encounter, thereby increasing the astonishnent of that young lady.

'You do not remember me?' said Mary. No, indeed, how should I, when I never saw you in my life before, to my knowledge.

'Not one night?' asked the simple Mary; just as Miss Wilmot would think of noticing a poor girl like Not one wet night in a Two-penny Omni-Yes, I recollect now, I did get into a Two-penny

MECHANIC EXHIBITION.

OUR FIRST VISIT,-BY EPES SARGENT. At last we have seen the Mechanics' Exhibition. We went with the honest intention of giving our readers some account of its contents; but we had no sooner enlittle, pale, smiling girl, who expressed the greatest de-pilicity of objects arranged for display, than we began to the suspended gallery and passed into the suits of spacious halls over Quincy Market, and saw the musical instraments, the articles of jewelry, of glass and all sorts of ware, the steam engines and spinning jennies, the cabinet work and uphoistery, the agricultural implements, the clocks, the artificial legs, the best and bed steads, the daguerreotypes, the patent shower-baths, the silver pitchers, the tortoise shell combs, and we know not what -our misgivings increased to downright despair. We grew dizzy and confused. Our attention, like a shattered looking-glass, seemed to catch at all objects; but at none with precision. In attempting to see too much wesaw no one thing distinctly.

In this mood we retraced our steps to Fancuil Hall. There the bright, wide-awake countenance of John Han-'Yes,' replied Mary, 'I have it at home. From the Boston Post, THE OLD LADY'S TALK.

Partingtoniana .- As Mrs. Partington's name hag been brought so often before the public, we humbly conceive that we may speak in a particular manner of one or two of the prominent beauties of her character without nfringing the canons of good breeding, or giving offence to that estimable lady. An anecdote which has recently been brought to our notice will strikingly illustrate the ruth and force of our position.

Mrs Partington's heart is a heart and no mistake. A poet would compare it to a clear, deep, well, fed and sustained by the united tribute of a hundred gently flows ing springs of kindness and humanity, from which the bucket of compassion often comes up filled to the brim, to irrigate her 'amiable cheeks,' and bear witness to her tender emotions and generous sympathies. But to typify that in agnanimity, resignation and indomitable strength of character which have ever supported her through the petty jury trials of a long and u eful life, lies not within the poet's art. If she sometimes gives way to a little techines, it means nothing, and should not be placed to the account of constitutional irrascibility. Say what you will, she possesses in an eminent degree all the attributes have misgivings as to our enterprise. As we traversed of genuine benevolence. Mrs. Partington loves her felshe frowns like bricks at oppression in its every form.

'A brute in human shape,' was andeavoring the other morning to propel a somewhat stubbern cow and calf brough the street by dint of a huge whip, which ha applied with some violence. This happened right under Mrs Partington's window, and as soon as she saw it, the window and her back was up simultaneously. If that tellow ever had any of the milk of human kindness n him, it has been bent into cider syllables, and they are soured and spoils before this time,' said she looking skillet handles and pokers at the aforesaid 'brute ir numan shape,' all the while. 'It's to bad that he should beat that poor cow and her infant prodigy at such a rat -it's almost cantimount to homicide-and the fellow does it with such apparent vindictiousness! The milk (human kindness indeed! It's pretty well skimmed ar morning paper for relief. Now it so happened, in co sequence of her flutter, that instead of beginning at t beginning as is her wont, she attacked the newspay in medias. The first article her eyes lighted upon wa musical criticism; and they no sooner met the italicis words, 'Mrs Bishop's execution,' then she dropped paper, a cold shudder ran through her, and she sobl out hysterically, 'I declare to gracious if they hav hung a woman! COUNTY CONVENTION. The WHIGS OF ESSEX COUNTY will hold a Cenvention at the Court House in Ipswich, on TUES-DAY the 12th day of October next, at 10 o'clock, A.M. for the nomination of Senators for the County, and the transaction of other necessary business.

Each Town in the County is requested to send Three Delegates to this Convention, for every Representative in the Legislature to which it is entitled; and Towns that are not thus yearly represented will please send Two Delegates each. WM. PEIRCE,
Chairman of Whig County Committee.

HISTORY OF DANVERS.

We are pleased to learn that a History of the Town of Danyers has been prepared, and if sufficient encouragement is given by our citizen, in the way of subscription for copies, it will soon be published. The author, Rev. Mr. HANSON, of this town, has been constantly and laboriously employed for more than a year past, in collecting and arranging materials for the work. Besides the mass of documentary and other materials, he has obtained much is formation from our aged citizens, and others who are familiar with evonts that have transpired in the old "Salem Village" and "Middle Precinct." From a cursory examination of Mr Hanson's manuscript, we are enabled with confidence to reconmend the work to the favor and patronage of our citizens, and also to congratulate them on the near accomplishment of an undertaking so desirable as a good and faithful HI tory of our Town.

It must be evident to all that the chief interest in such a work will be felt by our own citizens, and it will be incumbent on them to give it support. It is therefore desirable that each family should have at least one copy and as many have f iends abroad, who would be interested in our own town, we hope a large number of our present a Subscription paper to our townsmen, which we exercise more authority over them; they could have transportation, and the remaining seven he gave to perhope will be promptly filled that the work may soon be

A meeting of this Committee is requested at the Town Rooms, on Monday evening next, to organize and adopt coming election.

LARCENY .- On Tuesday evening last, about 10 Win Foster,) on returning from Salem, unlocked the door and entered the store, for the purpose of obtaining a coat which he had left there, -- the store having been previously closed for the night by Mr Foster. Soon atter MrS, entered, and while he was in the act of lighting a match, a man jumped from behind the counter, within a few feet of where Mr S. was standing, knocking over man, who ran directly across the street, into the yard of five regiments comprise at least 4000 men. Mr Fuller and from thence into the garden of Miss Martin, where Mr S. lost sight of him, and he escaped. On examining the shop it was discovered, that the thief had s olen four jars of candy, about four dollars worth of coppers, a lot of screws, and made arrangements for carrying off the contents of a show-case; and left behind his pocket-book. His cap was found in the street where he had probably dropped it when he ran across. We understand that a young man was arrested and examined before Justice Proctor, on Thursday last, on suspicion of having been concerned in the affair, and ordered to recognize in the sum of $50 for his appearance at the next term of C. C. P.

We learn that the same individual-whose name George Morse, and is a native of Salem-was yesterday arrested on suspicion of having been concerned in the recent robbery of S. S. Johnson's store, Salem.

TEACHERS' MEETING.

In our last we stated the annual meeting of the "Es-SEX COUNTY TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION' would be held in this place, next week. We regret that the unavoidable circumstances render it desirable to change the place of meeting. By a notice in another column, it will be seen that the meeting will be held at Lyceum Hall, in Salem. We trust many of our citizens will find it convenient to attend.

BY JOSHUA LEAVITT.
Author of Leavitt's Easy Lessons WOHN P. JEWETT & CO., 23 Cornhill, Bookseller's Row, Boston, and 193 Essex street, Salem, have in course of publication one of the most valuable and ele-gent Readers for Common Schools which have ever been on superior paper, and is elegantly bound in embossed morrocco with cloth sides and gilt title, and is a vol. of 180 pages, 18mo.

Third Reader, is of the same general character as The Third Reader, is of the same general character as the Easy Lessons, but more advanced, intended for older scholars. The sprightly and attractive style and spirit of the Second Book runs through the Third. Great care has been taken in the Selection of poices, to get such as are calculated to interest the youthful mind, believing that it is next to impossable to teach a child to read well from heavy, dull prisy, uninteresting Text Book. This volume is 12 no of 2.00 percess, printed and heavel in the Book and is 12mo of 240 pages, printed and bound in the Best man

The Fourth Reader is intended for the higher classes in Common Schools and contains peices of a still higher character than those in the preceeding hooks. The Author has studiously avoided the introduction into this volume of extracts from claborate Essays, Speeches, Dissertations, &c., &c., and hasaimed to meet the wants of the Scholar in the School, room. He has selected and arranged such peices as he believes are calculated to arrouse and inspirit a school, and make good readers, and has rejected many peices of sterling character, and of great literary merit, deeming them altogether above the comprehension of the mass of scholars in our Common Schools. This volume will be ready about the 1st of September. The Fourth Reader is intended for the higher classes in

The attention of Teachers and School Committees is The attention of Teachers and School Committees is particularly carled to the eleg int and substantial of this eries of Readers, the Paper, Printing and Binding, and also to the VERY LOW PRICE which the publishers have determined to set them. THE MUSIC GRINDERS.

BY OLIVER W. HOLMES. There are three ways in which men take One's money from the purse, And very hard it is to tell Which of the three is worse; But all of them are bad enough To make a body curse.

You're riding out some pleasant day, And counting up your gains; A fellow jumps from out a hush And takes your horse's reins. Another hints some words about A bullet in your brains.

It's hard to meet such pressing friends In such a lonely spot; It's very hard to lose your eash, But harder to be shot; And so you take your wallet out, I hough you would rather not.

Perhaps your going out to dine,-Some fithy creature begs, You'll hear about the cannon-ball That carried off his pegs, And says it is a dreadful thing For men to lose their less.

He tells you of his starving wife, His children to be fed, Poor, title, levely innocents. All clamorous for bread,-And so you kindly he'p to put A bachelor to bed.

You're sitting on your window-seat Reneath a cloudless moon; You hear a sound, that seems to wear The semblance of a tune, As if a broken fife should strive To drown a cracked bassoon,

And nearer, nearer still, the tide Of music seems to come. There's something like a bussan voice, And something like a drung You sit in speechless agony, Until your ear is numb.

Poor "Home sweet home" should seem to be A very dismal place: Your "Auld acquintance," all at once Is altered in the face; Their discords sting through BURNS and MOORE Like hedge hogs dress'd in lace.

You think they are crusaders, sent From some internal clime, To pluck the eves of Sentiment, And dock the tail of Rhyme, To crack the voice of Melody, And break the legs of Time.

But, hark! the air again is still, The music all is ground, And silence line a poultice, comes To heal the blows of sound; It cannot be-it is,-it is,-A hat is going round.

No! Pay the dentist when he leaves A fracture in your jaw, And pay the owner of the bear, That stunn'd you with his paw. And buy the lobster that has had Your knuckles in his claw.

Bnt, if you are a portly man, Put on your fiercest frown, And talk about a constable To turn them out of town; Then close a sentence with an oath, And shut the window down!

And if you are a slender man, Not hig enough for that, Or, if you cannot make a speech, Because you are a flat, Go very quietly and drop A button in the hat!

Among the moral maxims pasted up in a country school in England is the following: "It is a sin to steal a pin, It is a greater to steal a tater."

Mr Editor A very polite invitation having been given by Erie Company No 2, to Ocean Company No 6, to before the Company, who with one solitary exception, unanimously, voted to accept the cordial invitation. A subsequent meeting was accordingly appointed to make the necessary preparations. In order to make as respectable a show as possible, our Engine was put in a tasteful and princely shape, and every arrangement made for the intended visit. At 4 o'clock on the aforesaid afternoon, a full company assembled at our head quarters, and by the direction of our first Director proceeded in true military order as far as the Plains where we were met by our friends of No 2 who gave us a gen-

This remark gave us a foretaste of what was to come. The trial of our Engines being finished, we were again formed in regular procession, and guided by the "star in the East" moved on with quickened pace and pretty keen appetites to the Engine hall, where a Collation was provided by Cempany No. 2. It was to all intents and purposes a strictly temperance supper, the old king was among the missing. The collation was admirably got up and reflected much credit on the generous and noble sons of Tapleyville, and en the ladies also, who of course, had a finger in the pie. There was no meanness, no huskiness, no stinting about it, but in the language of another-"it was a really excellent Collation." When the good things of the table were disposed of, the charm and enchantment of the meeting commenced. Captain Upton a very pleasant, good humored, sensible sort of a man appeared in the capacity of Chairman. He opened the meeting in a very brief and appropriate speech. He alluded to the occasion in a very happy manner as one of considerable importance, inasmuch, as it was eminently calculated to create union, harmony, and good feeling between the two companies, which friendship and good wall he carnestly desired might always exist. Coming together, said he, under such circumstances, enables us to learn much of each other, to know more of each others views, of each others feelings, and each others sympathies. It was to him one of the happiest events of his life which he should long remember with joy. He wished to say much, and more than he could express.

His leading ideas were judiciously and eloquently expressed and had your correspondent taken notes would have given them in full: The gentleman closed, with an appropriate sentiment and sat down amid lond cheer-

He had been his Secretary from his cradle to the present moment, and no one was so well acquainted with the history of Dr. Plunken's life.

He was almost universally, known throughout the four continents, as the most learned, scientific and above allthe most skillful physician in the universe.

But the Dr. and his Secretary seemed to be the sine qua non on the oocas on. The ready wit and cutting sarcasm of the later gentleman, and his readiness to give a seniment when called apon, excited universal admiration, and kept the meeting in one continuous roar of laughter. Dr Plunkett was often alluded to and generally responded by giving a toast; always in verse; and it was almost impossible for one to retain their risibles, especially, when he was preceded by Mr. Puff-blower, who never failed to descant in the most glowing terms, on the Dr's science, reputation, and professional skill.

The Dr's physiognomy was also a source of no little annusement to those who were ignorant of the many changes which the human countenance is succeptible of. It was a medley of personifications. Such as people were not accustomed to behold. It was mirth-provoking -in the extreme, sufficient to change the most somber visage of a melancholic old maid into a complete parenthesis, or to throw the most dejected old time seasoned hypocondriac into side shaking paroxysms. For upwards of two hours it was one continual, unabated stream of speeches, toasts, songs, stamping, cl pping, cheers and laughter; and after we left the half and were marshailed in our vehicles which were provided for our little house, and asked a lad who was gazing out of the Howard Johnson and Kate Hardan, conveyance home, the same demonstrations of hilarity were manifested by those who were left behind until we were beyond the sound of their voices.

In view of the occasion, it is due to our friends of No. 2 to say, that they acted with becoming deference towards us, and their gentlemanly conduct throughout the whole affair was a convincing proof of their highest regard and affection for No. 6, Each individual seemed to be deeply imbued with a spirit of courtesy and good will, and we hope that the same benign disposi ion will not be wanting in the heart of those who constituted the invited guests on the occasion. Not a solitary individual exhibited signs of dissatisfaction, but to a man all were more than well pleased.

Once upon a time, a queer old fellow, named Smith started from a southern city upon a pedestrian excursiou of about one hundred miles. He was not such a very old fellow, either; he was about forty years older then when he was born. Our company is far from a dull one, and the day passed in riding or walking furnishes materia al for a pleasant evening, when we collect our small orces in the corner of the parlor, and talk the hours away. They fly swiftly enough, I assure you. Wa have a sort of understanding that it is the duty of each one to seize on every anecdote, and especially every company. Mrs Johnson was not rich in the world's goods. The few acres which she rented, afforded a mere subsistence, and Kate and Edward assisted her in her labors. It was not strange that those two children, when one was sixteen and the other seventeen, should love one another Kate was a strange child. They said she talked with those whom others could not see-and I do not doubt it I have no doubt she held a high communion with her sainted mother. At all events her voice fell on her ear is dreams of day as well as night, until she could no tonger resist its earnest call.

She faded. One by one the bonds which held her to her cottage home were loosened; one by one her gay girlish affections were mastered and suppressed, until one only remained, and then she was ready. That one love was the mightiest of all She did not crush that, for she was thoughtful enough that that might live when death was passed; for there are affections strong enough to reach from earth to heaven.

The morning of her departure came, with its sweet spring flowers and atmosphere laden with odors of the country. All things seemed to be strangely solemn .-The sun peered curiously in at the little lattice; and fell across the foot of the bed on which the slender form of of the dying girl lay. Her bird sang doubtfully in its rage, and the very cat by the hearth looked up and seemed to feel that there was something sad going on.

The moment of agony at length came. She had parted with all but him, and now she held his hand between her two, and smiled on his pale face, (as pale as hers,) and spoke in a low sweet tone of all the past and future. "You will miss me when you go after the cow in the evening, Ned, and the lane will be lonely will it not? And when you sit down here by the hearth with mother, and my chair is empty-you'll miss me then too, brother. You'll sit at the table with her, and have no one at the side of it;" and her voice broken and faint as it was, fell to a lower tone as she continued: "Go out n the twilight sometimes. Ned, and sit down under the tree by the sping on the red seat. I'll come there if I can?" A moment passed in silence as he leaned over Hodges and Condry. toward her; then suddenly throwing her arms about his neck she said, "I love you, love you, love you, brother Ned;" and drawing his head down pressed her lips to his, in the last long kiss of life, and laying his cheek close ngainst hers, smiled a smile of serene and joyful hope, and Kate was an angel!

"Is that all your story? did you ask? Not by considerable, my dear friend. There's more love to come yet. Author of Leavitt's Easy Lessons.

TOHN P. JEWETT & CO., 23 Combill, Bookseller's Row, Boston, and 193 Essex street, Salem, have in course of publication one of the most valuable and elegant Readers for Common Schools which have ever been offered to the Educators of Youth. They will be comprised in 4 Books, as follows:

The Primer or First Book or Little Lessons for Little

The Second Book, or leaven's Easy lessons, is a on superior paper, and is elegantly bound in embossed morrocco with cloth sides and gilt title, and is a vol. of 180 pages, 18mo.

Third Reader, is of the same general character as The Third Reader, is of the same general character as the Easy Lessons, but more advanced, intended for older scholars. The sprightly and attractive style and spirit of the Second Book runs through the Third. Great care has been taken in the Selection of peices, to get such as are calculated to interest the youthful mind, believing that it is next to impossable to teach a child to read well from heavy, dull prosy, uninteresting Text Book. This volume is 12mo of 240 pages, printed and bound in rho Best manner.

The Fourth Reader is intended for the higher classes in The Fourth Reader is intended for the higher classes in Common Schools and contains peices of a still higher character than those in the preceeding books. The Author bas studiously avoided the introduction into this volume of extracts from elaborate Essays, Speeches, Dissertations, &c., &c., and hasaimed to meet the wants of the School in the School room. He has selected and arranged such peices as he believes are calculated to arrouse and inspirit a school, and make good readers, and has rejected uany perces of sterling character, and of great literary merit, deeming them altogether above the comprehension of the mass of scholars in our Common Schools. This volume will be ready about the 1st of Sep. comprehension of the mass of scholars in our Common Schools. This volume will be ready about the 1st of Sep-

Having had occasion to observe, that some persons af-dicted with Hernia, having suffered much from the want dicted with Hernta, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the peculiarities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr.-J. F. I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unformly given full satisfaction in tneir application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the hab it of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

Lorraine's vegetable Pills is rapidly on the increase they are becoming very popular. I sell more and more every day. As a curative medicines and purifier of the blood, I think they stand unrivalled. One fact I have noticed, that no one that has used them finds any fault with them; they have wrought some very great cures. One lady, who has been confined to the house and bed, a great part of the time, for menty years, is now cured and able to work most of he time, after having taken 3 boxes only of Loranie's Pills!! I might name many other cases where the cures have been as great, but have not time.

Doctrn.

From Neal's Saturday Gazette. THE BABE'S DREAM.

BY CATHERINE W. BARBER. Softly there lay in the flush of the morning, A heantiful babe in its rest, Its dimpled white hand by the pillow All deeply yet gently was pressed -Its lips like a rose-bud unfolding, Were parted in beautiful smiles-It DREAMS! and its dream was of wandering In fairer than Eden's bright wilds.

Singing birds on their bright jewelled pinions Swept by him and cut the blue air-The dew drops like diamonds were glittering, The flowers never grew half so fair; The river sent upward its murmuring, As thro' the green valley it wound, He listened, entranced, for each feeling By ecstacy sweet was spell-bound.

The world it was peopled by beings Much fairer then earth ever knew: Gold-spangled their wings were, and trail ng, They brushed from the flow rets the dew; Or upward they darted, and music Stole ravishing sweet thro' the air; Not an eye, nor a brow nor a feature, Bore wrinkle or symbol of care.

Dream on, happy sleeper! just woke into being, Bright tinted may well be thy dreams; LIFE, LIFE! that will teach thee of sorrow and weeping.

Tho' all strewed with roses it seems; Hope and fancy may paint their fine pictures And tell thee of Bliss, on thy way; But heed me, I tell the old Sorrow Will wait on thy footsteps "always!"

LIFE'S LESSON SHOULD BE.

BY R. HALLECK.

Forget not-regret not The joys that have fled, Though sweeter and fleeter. Than fresh odors shed From the jessamine's cup, Or the bright chalice hid From the gaze of the sun 'Neath the violet's lid.

Forget not-regret not; Hope ever should buin The incense of love In her funeral urn, Shedding glory and light O'er the gems of the past, By time on the altar Of memory cast.

Forget not-regret not; Why should we regret, While one star remains, That another has set? And though all may have faded, Others brighter by far Through the gloom may arise Than the once worshipped star.

Forget not-regret not: Life's lesson should be, Like the stars that are hung O'er the limitless sea, A guide to our path, Brighter links of the chain To lead us and bind us To virtue again.

'You look like anything but a happy Benedict, Fred,' emarked a young man in a civilian's dress, who, leaning against a water butt with his feet over the bulwarks had been watching the ripples just spreading from the side, and amusing himself in aiming chips at the white crests as they sparkled and turned into their liquid beds. 'Happy!' rejoined the other, 'Happy! and how could one be happy, with a burning impatience, such as I feel at the heart? Do you suppose I find pleasure in realizing the distance that still separates me from my home; and to be bound down to this sluggish thing of wood and hemp, when I want wings to cleave the space and bear me swiftly to my dear watching wife. Think of it, Harry! Three years absence: twelve months without a line or a message; and now, within a few paltry miles, condemned to watch the bubbles on the water for hour after hour, as they float by like so many snails' and, hurriedly breaking from his companion, he resumed his rapid pace over the deck- 'Wings would never suit him in such a mood,' muttered the other, -- 'nothing but the lightning for him, and then he'd never feel how

Evening came creeping over the water with a stealthy foot, chasing the last sunbeams as they fled hastily up the Eastern hills,-until no light remained but that of the moon, which threw upon the waters trembling blades of silver, and painted upon the surface black distorted images of the bold heights which towered almost above the the vessel already entering withing the range of the Highlands.

The two friends leaned over the side in silence, a the sloop dipped into the dark mountain shadows, like a hare seeking a covert, and anon, as if assured of safety, shot out into the pure moonlight, joyfully clapping her white wings as the breeze f. eshened

'What a glorious night!' said Harry; 'just such as one as that after your wedding, Fred, when you must needs take a moonlight 'sail to Washington's valley, and display your power of mental abstraction by bringing up under the rocks on Constitution Island. With what looks of amazement we emptied ourselves upon the romantic strand you had promised, which proved to be a slippery rock about four feet high and fifty yards from shore. If those old cliffs never echoed the voice of man before, they had their fill of it then, when the tide rose and Granger made the important discovery that the bottom-plank was out. Do you recollect the old skipper that took us off? How he edged away when he saw your Lucy's white dress, and thought her a spirit luring him to destruction, (the suspicion old wretch;) but his taste for money soon quieted his scruples, when St. John at a venture pitched half a dollar into his crazy craft, and asked him if it felt hot. How the heavy shadow of the island enshrouded us that night while all beyond was bathed in light, even to the white cascade that sparkled in the cove at the valley, and the glancing of the sentry's musket before the 'Yellow Barrack's on the plain.' 'Did you ever have a presentiment, Harry?' interrupted the other,-the thought of some evil, impending and imminent? Did a cloud ever come over your brightest hour, like that little film which is just gliding over the moon:-and when that Loud came, did it poison the very air you drew in, ningling like an infernal vapor with the sweetest draught and sickening your very soul; and all with no visible cause; but so immovably fixed in your mind that no resolution, no determination could shake off the apprebension which tingled in every nerve, and drove its burning iron into your inmost heart? I felt it on that night, Harry, -and for months since, when quartered in the Indian country on the banks of the Ohio, I have watched the water in just such a moonlight as that, until I saw the slimy rock, and the disabled boat, and Lucy with a face as white as the roses that bound her hair, trembling more for me than herself, and pressing to her side the arm I passed around her, as if to sav 'even death shall not separate us.' I thought her already an angel, and I a gross creature of earth; and, Harry. I feel it new; I cannot drive it from my mind. Her face rises on every wave. gazing tenderly into mine with the wreath over her brown hair, and such a sweet, sad smile playing about her lips. It almost maddens me. Even the ripples are breathing her whisper to my ear; and look! that foam breaking from the bow is but the waving of her long white dress.' And he grasped his friend's arm convulsively.

'It is but a freak of the imagination, Fred.' said the other, southingly; but as he spoke the sloop passed into the murkey shadow of a huge mountain surging slowly along within a stone's throw of the black cliffs, which echoed back the plash of the waves beneath the bow. and sent down a hoarse murmur from the pines that crowned their summits, awakening in the breast an overpowering sense of gloom and desolation. - Both speakers felt sensibly the force of the contrast, and in silence retired to the cabin.

Children, have you ever heard of Isaac T. Hopper, or Friend Isaac, as he is familiarly called? He belongs to the society of Friends; and if you should happen to meet him you would not have to be told that he was a very good natured man, not particularly averse to an occasional joke. Well, a few days ago, the old gentleman came into our office; and among the st ries he told was one which we must re-tell.

While residing in Philadelphia, I had in my yard a pear tree, which bore most excellent fruit. Between my eard and that of one of my neighbors, was a very high fence, with sharp pickets upon it. Now I did not put these sharp pickets there. I don't approve of such things. It was the landlord's work. Well, one year, when the pear tree bore very abundantly, there happened to be a girl belonging to my neighbor's family, who was as fond of pears as I was myself, and I saw her several times climb the high fence, and walk very careful along between the pickets until she came opposite ket with fruit, and carry it away.

One day I called upon my young friend with a busket of the nicest pears I could find. 'Rebecca,' said I, 'here are some fine pears for thee.' She did not know what I meant. I explained: 'Rebecca, I brought these pears on purpose for thee. I wish to make thee a present of them, as I see thou art fond of them. 'I don't want them, sir.'

'Ah, but thou dost, Rebecca; else thou would not ake so much pains almost every day to get them.' Still she would not take the pears, and I used a little more eloquence:

'Rebecca,' said I, 'thou must go and get a basket for these pears, or I shall leave them on the carpet. I am sure thou must like them, or thou would not climb such a high and dangerous fence to get at them. Those pickets are very sharp, Rebecca; and if thy feet should slip Softly came the breath of evening, laden with the rich while thou art walking along on the fence-and I am perfume of the bending flowers which drooped beneath very much afraid they will-thou would get hurt a great as they belong to me. Voted-That the Committee recommend that the Whigs of the North part of the town hold a meeting preminary to the annual caucus for nomination of candidates for Representatives to the Legislature, and select candidate from that part of the town, to be proposed t the caucus,

The object of this recommendation is to restore the mity and harmony of the Whig party in Danvers at the coming election. The excited state of sectional feeling in regard to Railroad matters has so far subsided that s believed all good Whigs will feel disposed to unite and concentrate theri efforts in the election of Representotives, and we think all will feel disposed in matters where the interests of the two sections may be different to have both parts properly represented. A conciliatory course pursued this fall we think will anquestionally bring back that good feeling and harmony which has ever until recently existed and characterized the Whigs o. this town. United then, let us go to the Polls, and on the important and all engrossing issues Voted, That the Petition, and the proceedings of presented to the people in this State, show a larger Whig vote than we have ever shown before. TEACHERS' MEETING.

The Essex County Teachers' Association commenced its eighteenth annual meeting in Salem, last week, with a very full attendance. The meeting was opened with introductory services, which, often the following introductory remarks were made by Mr Charles Northend, of this town, the President of the Association:

Respected friends and fellow laborers:-It is pleasespecting the quality of different sorts of bread have giv- ant, on this occasion, to see so many assembled with nrise to so much waste. The general belief is that whom we have been accustomed to meet on previous pread made of the finest flour is the best, and that and similar occasions. We are reminded, by our carwhiteness is the proof of its quality; but both are popu- calars, that this is the eighteenth anniversary of our lar errors. It is well known by men of science, that the Association, Many of those who aided in its organizabread of unrefined flour will sustain life, while that of tion, and took an active part in its earlier operations, water, and he will live and enjoy good health, give him earthly scenes, or have been induced to leave the protrials and cares, its responsibilities and its pleasures, and engage in other pursuits. Hence we see not here to day many of the original founders and supporters of one who has been a member of this Society from its commencement, and who, by a regular attendance up-J. H. Prince, Esq., of Boston, has been appoint- on its meetings, and by a uniform and lively interests in ed by Gov. Upon an'examination of the record, I find that there have been one hundred and fifty lectures delivered before the Association. Ninety have been from actual Teachers, and seventy-five from Teachers within the States which have appointed November 25th for the County. Several of these lectures have been repeated observance of thanksgiving—making seven so far as before the American Institute of Instruction, and publi shed in the volumes of that useful institution.

and to harmonize as their interests demand?

The European times says: The paintal duty of place ing upon record a fresh catalogue of commercial failures is again imposed upon us. Since the departure of the last packet, the mercantile community has been convulsed to the very centre; and last Saturday, the 2d inst. closed in London, Manchester and Liverpool, over one of the most disestrous weeks which has ever been known in the memory of the present peneration. The depreciation of all description of stocks and property has now become truly alarming; and we as disinterested but sympathising spectators of the distress around us, endeavor in vain to discover any signs of immediate relief; the state of the capital and ordinary resources of the country becoming every day more and more "fixed" and unavail:ble.

The Corn market, since the 19th ult., has been subiect to considerable fluctations. On the market day of the 20 ult., supplies of Wheat having come forward but sporingly, prices continued to advance and in Mark Lane fully 4s to 5s. higher rates were obtained compared with the previous week's quotations. As the week advanced, prices receded, and, on the market day of the 27th ult., supplies coming in more freely, the dealers were not disposed to make purchases, and whatever was offered was readily cleared at a reduction of 5s, per quarter on the currency of the market day of the 20th

The buisness, in foreign Wheat was less extensive and he reduction was not more than 3s. or at most 4s. per quarter. On the market day of the 29th ult., the trade was dull, and few transactions took place, although sellers would have made a concesson on the prices of the 27th if buyers would have shown any desire to do buisness. The top price of the best description of Wheat may now be quoted at 60s. per qr., with a dull market, The best Western Canal Flour commands in Liverpool 26s. Cd. per barrel.

BY JOSHUA LEAVITT.
Author of Leavitt's Easy Lessons OHN P. JEWETT & CO., 23 Cornbill, Bookseller's Row, Boston, and 193 Essex street, Salem, have in course of publication one of the most valuable and elegant Readers for Common Schools which have ever been offered to the Educators of Youth. They will be completed in 4 Books, as follows:

The Primer or First Book or Little Lessons for Little Learners, containing 72 pages, 18mo, elegantly illustrated with numerous desims by Mallory, printed on new type, and superior paper, and bound in full cloth, with gilt sides, making a serviceable, elegant and attractive book for a child.

The Second Book, or leavitt's Easy lessons, is a work which has been so universally approved by the best Teachers in New England for 20 years past that no farther recommendation is needed. This is substintially the same work, with a new Introduction. In its external apearance, however, it is very unlike its predecessors. The present edition is printed from new type, on superior paper, and is elegantly bound in embossed morrocco with cloth sides and gilt title, and is a vol. of 180 pages, 18mo.

The Phird Reader, is of the same general character as The Third Reader, is of the same general character as the Easy Lessons, but more advanced, intended for older scholars. The sprightly and attractive style and spirit of the Second Book runs through the Third. Great care has been taken in the Selection of peices, to,get such as are calculated to interest the youthful mind, believing that it is next to impossable to teach a child to read well from heavy, dul' prosy, uninteresting Text Book. This volume 18 12mo of 240 pages, printed and bound in rhe Best man-

The Fourth Reader is intended for the higher classes in Common Schools and contains peices of a still higher character than those in the preceding books. The Author has studiously avoided the introduction into this volume of extracts from claborate Essays, Speeches, Dissertations, &c., &c., and hasaimed to meet the wants of the Scholar in the School room. He has selected and arranged such peices as he believes are calculated to arrouse and inspirit a school, and make good readers, and has rejected many perces of sterling character, and of great literary merit, deeming them altogether above the comprehension of the mass of scholars in our Common Schools. This volume will be ready about the 1st of Sep-

The attention of Teachers and School Committees is The attention of Teachers and School Committees is particularly called to the elegant and substantial of this series of Readers, the Paper. Printing and Binding, and also to the VERY LOW PRICE which the publishers have determined to set them. We hope for large sales and shall be satisfied with small profits.

BOSTON, MASS.

JAMES FREDERICK FOSTER Continues to manufacture all the various approved (Russes at his Old Stand, No. 305 (opposite No. 264) Washington street, entrance in Temple Avenue, Boston where he has been for the last ten years—and his residence and business being both in the same building, he can be seen at home nearly the whole of the time, day or evening. He has more room and better conveniences for the Truss business than any other person engaged in it in this city or any other.

Also —Abdominal Supporters, for Prolapsus Uteri—Trusses for Prolapsus Ani—Suspensory Bags, Knee Caps, Back Boards, Steel Shoes, for deformed feet. Trusses repaired at one hour's notice, and made to answer oftentimes as well as new. The subscriber having worn a Truss himself 25 years, and fitted so many for the last 10 years, feels confident in being able to suit all cases that may come to him-Convex Spiral Trusses, Dr. Chase's Trusses, formerly Convex Spiral Trusses, Dr. Chase's Trusses, formerly, sold by Dr. Leech; Trusses of galvanized metal that will not rust, laving wooden and copper pads, Read's Spiral Truss; Rundell's du; Salmon's Ball and Socket; Sherman's patent French do; Bateman's do, double and single, Stone's Trusses; also, Trusses for children, of all siz.es Dr. Fletcher's Truss, and Marsh's Truss, Dr. Hull's Truss. Theometa's Kachet Truss, and the Shakers' Rocking Trus. Thompson's Kachet Truss, and the Shakers' Rocking Trusand Ear Trumpets, that will enable a person to converse low with one that is hard of hearing.

All ladies in want of Abdeminal Supporters or Trusses, waited on by his wife, Mrs. Caroline D. Foster, who has had ten years experience in the business.

CERTIFICATES. From Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston.
Having had occasion to observe, that some persous af fixed with Hernia, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the peculiarities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. F. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath.—After some months of observation of his work, I am satisfied that Mr. Foster is well acquirited with the case. fied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufac-ture of these instruments, and ingenious in accommodat-ing them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel myself called upon to recommend him to my professional brethren, and to the public, as a person well fit their wants in regard to these important articles.

JOHN C. WARREN, M. D., Boston.

From Dr. Greene, Boston.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has un-ormly given full satisfaction in tneir application. The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglec that he will give them a good article, and a ron he greet in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the hab it of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

From the Phænixville (Penn.) Pioneer. J. G. PERCIVAL.

Annexed we present a remarkable poem by Percival copied from his last volume, which appeared in 1843, entitled "The Dream of a day, and other Poems." If our readers have not seen it, they will find it well worthy their attention. The Poet is still living, the the State of Connecticut. He is not less distinguished naturalist and geologist, poet, linguist, geographer, historian and composer of music. The world will never know how much it is indebted to him for the accuracy and perfection he has given to several valuable works which he has revised and prepared for the press. He is one of the most indefatigable men who ever lived, man. THE HUNTER DEATH. BY JAMES C. PERCIVAL. Ich had' eine Wiego so, schmick and nette .-

I am a bold hunter-my hunt is wide; I mount in the morning, and swift I ride; O'er vale, o'er hill I speed away, And pause not, rest not, through the long, long day.

My string is of sinew, my bow is long, And sharp is my arrow, my arm is strong: I point my shaft with deadly aim; It wizzles, pierces—then it burns like flame.

And I have a carbine slung on back-It rings through the forest with startling crack; Like thunder crash, it echoes round, And jarring, quivering, 'neath it shakes the ground.

And sure is the foot of my coal black steed; Ever onward he races with lightning speed; He snuffs in every wind the prey, Then high exulting, widely bursts away.

And keen is the scent of my well trained pack; Through wood and through thicket they keep the track The game its subtlest art may try-It aids not, boots not; quick the bounds are by.

I sound on my clanging born his knell, And fiercely they answer with howl and yell; They plunge through swamp and dash through flood, Yet, wilder rages, hot, their thirst for blood.

One hound is jet black, and I called him War; And his strong limbs are spotted with wound and scar; His eye is red-like coal its fire, And ever sleepless burns, his demon ire.

Another close follows, with hoarser din, Coarse featured and shaggy-I call him Sin: Blood-shot his eye-his froth is bluz, And drips his venom thick, like poison dew.

Another is sallow, and guant of limb; His lips are pale, and his eye is dim; I call him Famine—but he is strong, And swift, yet silent, sweeps, like night, along.

So with twanging bow, and with clanging horn, To dusk of night, from break of morn, On cold black steed, I speed away, And pause not, rest not, through the long, long day:

TREASURE ON EARTH.

Miscellany.

AND TREASURÉ IN HEAVEN.

BY T. S. ARTHUR. Mr Benedict Percival, one of the wealthiest men in the city, sat reading a newspaper, when three gentlemen entered his counting-room in the formal manner in which committee men usually present themselves-especially committee men appointed to raise a subscription for some public charity. When Mr Percival opened his newspaper that morning, the first paragraph that met his eye was the following: 'At the town meeting held yesterday, a committee of three from each ward was appointed to wait upon our citizens to receive their subsciptions in aid of the sufferers by the late destructive fire in our sister city. This duty will be entered upon at once. We trust that the gentlemen who have the matter in charge, will meet with a hearty reception from our liberal minded and benevolent townsmen. We may lead the van in this noble work, if we will. Let us do it ' Over this Mr Percival pondered for some time, with greatest prodigy of learning genius and eccentricity of his foreinger upon his lip and his eyes upon the ceilingthe age. He has accomplished a geological survey of At length, as if his action in the matter were definitely settled, he resumed the reading of the newspaper, and as a mathematician and profound thinker than as a was engaged in that agreeable occupation when the gentlemen alluded to above, called in at his counting room.

Two or three days after this, the newspapers announce ed the result of the subscription raised in the various wards in the city. The particular instanc :s of liberality were named, conspicuous among which, stood the fact, left the table in a few minutes, and without speaking a that Benedict Percival Esq., who 'ever foremost in acts word, took up his hat and hurried from the room. There lived in the city where this fact occurred, a a dollar to give her importante hadderd; and sometimes | what he had done for the good of his fillow men, and v gave her small sums, such as quarter and half dollars threatened, and warned her to leave the premises; but still it availed not to bring him his due. Food and fuel the woman must have for her children; after these were obtained, there was little or nothing left from her earnings. Thus it went on, until seven dollars were due for rent, when the landlord became seriously alarmed, lest in a last resort, which was often made by him in a little or no cost of feeling, there should not be enough in the widow's two rooms that the law would allow him to seize, for the liquidation of his petty claim. He at once informed the widow, that, unless she paid him what was due, immediately, he would sell her out. But do you know I cannot do that,' said the unhappy

'Go and borrow it from some one.' The widow shook her head.

'You do sewing for several families. Go to them and ell them that you will be turned into the street if they do not lend you enough money to pay your rent. It will be but a dollar a peice from seven different individuals. Do it, and money will come quick enough.

'I have no hope of returning it; and to borrow under such circumstances, would be dishonest.' 'It is just as dishonest not to pay your rent,' said the etty landlord, harshly.

The widow answered nothing.

'You can do as your please,' resumed the unfeeling man. But I can tell you one thing-if I don't get my rent to-morrow I shall obtain it in the quickest possible way, and let these rooms to some one who will pay a great deal better than you have ever done. So you know what you have to depend upon. With this the landlord went away, and the widow was left to her own sad thoughts. The oldest of her children was a boy between eleven and twelve years of age. The other two were girls; the youngest three years old. The lad was present during the brief interview that passed between his mother and her landlord. His young blood grew tot in his veins, and he wished for his mother's sake, that he were a man. Charles went to school with a heavy heart. He up derstood from what had been said, clearly, the extremity in which his mother was placed. And he also knew that the threat of seizing upon their things and selling them would be executed on the next day, unless the rent was paid, for more than one distraint had taken place at the instance of this man, within the past year without compunction, and turned into the streets .-Young as the child was, he had been an eye witness to such scenes of distress. To one who has a dairy farm, the cultivation of an acre or two in tomatoes, would be repaid by a greater profit than any vegetable we know. From an acre not less than eight bushels might be gathered every day, from July until frost.

There is some troub'e in picking them, but then nearly every farmer has children; his little boys-ay, and big boys, who would not be the worse for a little work. We should be glad to see the experiment tried on a large er scale than ours, and to learn the result .- S. C. Tem-

A little more than one week remains before the election, and in that time there is much, very much to be done, if Danvers intends to do her duty. It is an election of the greatest unportance in its results. It is the last time the Whigs of this State will be called upon to deposite their votes previous to the Presidential Campaign of 1848. Shall then, the glorious success of this Fall he a bright omen in that struggle. Shall we come out of the contest this Fall triumphant-a bright example to our sister States, proud and pre-eminent in support of the noble principles of the Whig party? Or shall inglorious dafunt result from our supinences and lethargy? Shall the proud Whig banner of Old Massachusetts be torn and trampled in the dust and we become a shame and reproach among the Whig states of the Union ?-Whigs can it be? Shall it be? With such issues as are presented to the people of this state can any one feel indifferent. Matters of temporary policy and expediency are not only involved in the result of the election, but a question paramount to, far exceeding in importance any issue ever before presented to the people of this Commonwealth, is to be met. The people of this State by H Felton. their vote this Fall will express their approval, or their disapproval of the causes which led to the present Mexican War, and the course pursued by the Administration in the prosecution of it. SOUTH READING RAILROAD.

In our last we published the doings at a Meeting of through South Danvers and South Reading to Lowell.-So much has heretofore been said on Railroad projects, starting from or passing through South Danvers, that we are desirous of pre-enting our views distinctly on this subject; and stating what we believe the public convenience demands, and what we shall endeavor to obtain.

First and foremost then, we believe the travel from Salem and vicinity requires a railroad track directly into the City of Boston, without the intervention of a ferry; and that it never will be properly accommodated, until this is brought about.

Second, that the transportation of materials for manuacturer's merchandize can never be advantageously done by way of the Eastern Raiload, in its present position — Elijah W. What, though it be three Salem to Lynn, and then branch off to the upper route in or four miles farther distant than the present road, if it be passed over in the same time, who will object to bor. this? Who cares what distance he rides on a railroad, if the comes to his point of destination at the same expense in the same time? Will it not be a very great convenience to the travelling public, to have two avenues to the City, that they may choose which they like the best?-And when two avenues shall be opened, will they not strive to see which will afford the best accommodation? We learn that Mr Hanson's history of the Town o Danvers is in such state of forwardness that it will soon be printed. In the mean time we hope all who have possession of materials which may be likely to aid the author in making the work complete, will furnish them immediately. We understand that Mr. Hanson has found the original Indian names of many localities in the town, which were supposed to have been irrecoverably east. He has also, in his investigations, discovered new jacts in relation to the Witchcraft delusion, which will fappear in his History.

Breathe low, thou gentle wind, Breathe soft and low! The beautiful lies dead! The joy of life is fled! And my lone heart is wed Henceforth to wo!

That thou should'st droop and die. At early morn! While yet thy youthful dew, A joyous fragrance drew, From every flower that grew Life's path along!

The green earth mourns for thee. Thou dearest one! A plaintive tone is heard From flower and leaflet stirred, And ev'ry fav'rite bird Sings sad and lone!

O! would it were a dream! And I might wake! And see the wonted light From out thine eye beam bright, And thoughts of death their flight Forever take!

Pale is thy brow, and dimm'd Thy sparkling eye! Affection's sweetest token, Is lost fore'er and broken! The last kind word is spoken-

Why did'st thou die!

All for the Best. A TALE.

I do not think there could be found in the three kingdoms a blither little old maid than Miss Millicent Orne, otherwise Aunt Milly, for so she was universally called by her nephews and nieces, first, second, and third cousins-nay even by many who could not boast the smallest tie of consanguinity. But this sort of universal aunthood to the whole neighborhood was by no means disagreeable to Miss Milly, for in a very little body she had a large heart, of a most India-rubber nature; not indeed as the simile is used in speaking of female hearts that 'never break-but always stretch.' But Miss Mildy's heart possessed this elastic nature in the best sensenamely, that it ever found room for new eccupants; and moreover, it was remarkable for its quality of effacing all unkindness or injuries as India-rubber removes pencilmarks from paper.

Aunt Milly -I have some right to call her so, being her very nephew, Godfrey Estcourt-was an extremely little woman. She had pretty little features, pretty little hands and feet, a pretty little work bag, in whose mysterious recesses all the children of the neighborhood loved to dive, seldom returning to the surface without .some pearl of price, in the shape of a lozenge or a sugar-plum. Her dress was always neat, rather old-fashioned, perhaps, but invariably becoming; her soft brown bair-it really was brown still-lay smoothely braided under a tiny cap; her white collar was ever smooth; inmazing quality of never looking worn, soil or dusty, but But trouble never comes to you as it does to other peoalways fresh and new. All my schoolboy disasters had been deposited in news had travelled before me, and I was not surprised me with, 'My dear boy, I am sorry for you.'

'It is the greatest misfortune I could have,' I cried I wish that wretch Sharples—'

'You mean to say, Godfrey, that since, instead of having a little fortune to begin the world with, you have hardly anything at all. Miss Laura Ash:on will not consider that her engagement holds. I expected it.'

'Oh, Aunt Milly, she is not so mean as that; but we were to be married in two years, and I could have got a share in Mortlake's office, and we should have been so happy! All is over now. Her father says we must wait, and Laura is to be considered free. Life is nothing to me now. I will go to America-or shoot my-

'Aunt Milly,' I said, turning away, 'it is easy for you to talk—you were never in love.'

A shadow passed over her bright face, and her eye glanced sadly at the mourning ring on the little hand; but Aunt Milly did not answer my allusion.

I do not think any boy of nineteen is doomed to be a victim to a loss of fortune or hopeless love,' she said, after a pause. 'My dear Godfrey this will be a trial of your Laura's constancy, and of your own patience and industry. Depend upon it all will turn out for the best.' 'Oh!' I sighed, 'you talk very well, Milly; but what 'I will tell you. You are young, clever, and have been for two years in a good profession. It will be your own fault if you do not rise in the world. Every man is m a great measure the architect of his own fortune; and where, as in your case, the foundation of a good education is laid so much easier is it to raise the superstructure. You may be a rich man yet by your own exertions, and money earned is ten times sweeter than money received by gift or legacy.'

This was the longest and gravest speech I had ever neard from Aunt Milly's lips. Its truth struck me so orcibly, that I felt rather ashamed of having so soon succumbed to ill-fortune; it seemed cowardly, and un-Milly with true feminine tact, saw her advantage, and by and by: depend upon it, Godfrey, all will turn out upon. Even Aunt Mully seemed to share in the general to the prices of the Caponer with the followed it up.

Aunt Milly laughed. 'As both these astronomical facts are rather unquestionable, you must excuse my doubti g a little still. But time will show, Meanwhile do not despair; be diligent, and be careful of the little you have left. Matters might have been worse with von.

'Ah, Aunt Milly, what a cheerful heart you have!-

'You are a little mistaken, Godfrey. At this moment I am in greater distress than you. By Sharple's failure

I was struck dumb with surprise and regret. Poor dear Aunt Milly! when she was listening to my lameneverywhere in request—at weddings, christenings, and to tations, and consoling me, how little did I know that ther credit be it spoken. > My hopes for poor Aunt Milly all vanished into thin air when, at the frigid dinner-table, where the very eatables seemed made of stone, I saw two young ladies of fifteen or thereabouts: one of the rudest hoyden tha ever disgraced female habiliments; the other, a pale, stooping girl, with sleepy blue eyes, and lank fair hair who never uttered a word, nor once lifted her eyes from the tablecloth.

> 'What will become of poor Aunt Milly?' I thought internally. Yet there she was, as cheerful as ever, talking to that solemn old icicle, Mr. Elphinson; listening patiently to the lava-flood of Miss Louisa's tongue; and now and then speaking to Miss Euphemia, whose only answer was a nod of the head, or a stare from her immense blue eves: 'Well!' I mentally circulated. 'Aunt Milly's talent for making the best of everything will be called into full requisition here, I suspect.

'Nevertheless when we parted, she assured me that she was quite content; that she would no doubt be very confortable at the Hall.

But those two dreadful girls, how will you manage them, Aunt Milly?' and a faint vision of the tall stout Louisa knocking my poor little aunt off her chair, in anger, came across my mind's eye. 'Poor things! they have no mother to teach them bet-

However, when a few months had rolled by, chance led me into the neighborhood, and I surprised Aunt Milly with a visit from her loving nephew.

It was early spring, and a few peeping primrosc brightened the old avenue. Underneath the dming-room windows, too, was a gay bed of purple and yellow crocuses, which I thought bore token of Aunt Milly's care; she was always so fond of flowers. The old trees were so shady and full of leaves; the grassy lawn so very green; the flowery-garden so bright with blossoms. Age and youth were not more different than the old cheerless Hall of former times and the beautiful spot I now looked the same clear, fresh, cheerful face, and neat little figure; both perhaps a little rounder, the result of a happy life and few cares. From the Voice of Industry. PROTECTIVE UNION.

Among the many systems of the presont day which call loudly for reform, is that of exchanges. It is one link in that vast chain of evils by which working men shared in the general amelionation and reform effected and women me surrounded, which needs to be cut out or welded in a different form ere they will receive an equivalent in return for what they pay out. The honest oiler after laboring year in and year out and paying his or her necessary expenses, seldom or never finds a dollar ed Aunt Milly's advice, and had begun to reap the fruit left to lay up for a 'rainy day,' cheated first in the lapor market and then by the exchanger; between the two he or she stands a pretty good chance of getting

It is an old saying that a 'penny saved is as good 'as penny earned,' and this is emphatically a money saving, thereby a money making concern. I shall not at this time attempt to explain the principles of the institution when fully carried out, but deal of matter of fact, such as the Union, in its present crude and imperfect state is ; and that you need not take my word alone I will give you the figures, taking such articles as are most commonly used by our housekeepers; giving the prices rejuvenescense. FOR GOVERNOR GEORGE N. BRIGGS.

Of Piltsfield. FOR LIEUT. GOVERNOR

JOHN REED. Of Yarmouth,

Whigs! Are you Ready!

On Monday next comes the Election. Are we ready for it? Will the Whigs of Danvers do their duty by polling a full vote? The Locos are working, quietly it may be, but zealously, and with the hope of springing a trap upon our apathy and sloth - we must be up and doing. It will be a burning shame, if with such motives as we have to quicken us, and with such power as we hold in our hands, we should not bring out our whole force and make it tell fairly in the great result. Our friends in the different School Districts must canvass them thoroughly. Search out every Whig Voter and get him to the noils. One rate many decide the Election of the Lorentz and to cut off all hope of any the company they keep, they will know how to estimate the noils. One rate many decide the Election of the Lorentz and only such — and to cut off all hope of any they will know how to estimate them. It has done to before, and to our 'deep mortification.-For the honor of the Party and the State, let it never be so again. Let us roll up a handsome old fashioned majority of ten thousand for Briggs and Reed, select our Senators for Essex by a triumphant popular majority, and send to the House Messrs. UPTON and SYLVES-TER,-two staunch Whigs-by such a vote that they may be proud to show themselves as the Representaday next, such a vote as shall rejoice the hearts of our friends throughout the Commonwealth, and materially aid in sustaining the ascendancy of true principles and good men.

FOR THE COURIER.

Mr. Editor—I attended the meeting to nominate candidates for Represent tives to the Legislature, and to my surprise I found that the North Parish whigs had held a meeting, and selected a man who had opposed the South Parish in their editor stoget a Representative that was in favor of the Valden Railr ad. Now if the South can swallow the pill, I have no ebjection, but I should rather try the cold water system first. By the way, is not Mr. Sylvester opposed to the South Reading Railroad? Think before you vote for a man who opposed your own interests, for my part I shall not vote for him, and there are a few more left of the same sort.

A Story of Apsley House.

One fine Antumn day in the year 1750, as his majes ty George II. was taking a rule in Hyde Park, his eyes was attracted by the figure of an old soldier was resting on a bench placed at the foot of an oak tree. The king, whose memory of faces was remarkable, recognized him as a veteran who had fought bravely by his side in some of his continental battles-and kindly accosted him, the old man who was lame, hobbled towards him.

'Well, my friend,' said the monarch, 'it is now some years since we heard the bullets whistle at the battle of Dettingen; tell me what has befallen you since.' 'I was wounded in the leg, please your majesty, and eceived my discharge and a pension, on which my wife

NOVEL SWINDLER.

Several of the fashionable novelists of Paris have recently had a lingh together-for which, however, they had pre-paid rather a high price. A chance inquiry, by one author, into the cause of another's unwonted depression of spirits, exposed a mutual experience of half dozen ethers. Eugene Sue was one of the sufferers. and his account of it, given at some length in the French ournals, is briefly as follows .

He was called upon one morning, after breakfast, by person who begged a private interview on a matter f some importance. A young gentleman of this city, one of that large food, and all other necessaries and luxuries of life, can mind to have satisfaction. A day or two afterwards he met the chevalier in the street.

Sharpy expostulated, threatened, entreated, but all appeal as his lapstone. Gradually a crowd collected round the door, to whom the shoemaker explained the circumstances of the case, amid loud and hearty laughter. A policeman was obliged to disperse the crowd, but the sharpy continued for hours to be the object of the most provoking curiosity. When night came he rushed out of the shop, and liverally footed it home.

The act of the shoemaker was illegal, but an honest nan can hardly censure it, when it is remembered that thousands of men toil from sunrise to sunset, only to be robbed of the rewards of their labor, by a parcel of lazy, dissipated scamps, who infest the town, and cheat everybody who trusts them. The result of the election in this state on Monday last. cannot but be gratifying to every good citizen who rejoices in the success of Truth and Right and the downfull of Error and injustice It is gratifying more especially when it is remembered that the issue upon which the late Election was contested, was BRIGGS -LIB-ERTY and PEACE, or CUSHING, SLAVERY and WAR. The fact that the candidate of the War Party was defeated by nearly 25,000 majority is a sufficient guarantee that the true spirit of republicanism governs the actions of a majority of he citizens of the old Bay State and that they will never encourage or tolerate oppression and wrong even though it be committed by rulers in high places.

Lowell Nov. 9th, 1847. To the Editor of the Danvers Courier.

Dear Sir, Knowing the interest that you and others feel in all contemplated Railroad improvements, in any manner bearing upon your town; and having been present at the Address of the Hon. S. C. Phillips, in relation to intercourse between Salem and Lowell, by Railroad. I thought it might be agreeable to you to unders and a lit tle of the views he presented. Mr. Phillips youknow is extremely plausible, and at the same time, not a little consequential. His geese are usually all swan. I, myself, I. with him are always somewhat conspecuous.

His plan is to establish a Railroad between the two Cities on the best possible route. He looks with contempt on your South Reading project, as also, upon any States, the debt would at once be repudiated. road going by Danvers Plains-and netwithstanding has onnection with the Essex Railrond as one of the Board of Directors he shoves that one side entirely. He probably thinks that he has got the Essex Road so he can hook on a Lowell Road also, he will be able to ride triumphant. I was sorry to see so respectable a man as Mr. P. in the company of so not rious a character as Wm. Livingston, E.q., -a man who is distinguished for treachery to all whom he has ever been connected in any public enterprize, and who will not hesitate to back out from his new made Salem friends, the moment any better offer is presented. In Lowell they think very well of Mr. P's proposals-but if there is a road, they will expect it to be built by the rich-men of Salem. My impression was, that the e is some scheme behind the

FOR THE COURIER. Tuesday Evening, Nov. 9th, 1857. Having just returned from the exciting scenes of the Election, I thought it might be profitable to reflect for noment, upon the grounds of the contention. On th one side we saw the Whigs of the North asserting the right to put forth their own man and have him supported on the other, the Waigs of the South declining to sup port a man who openly avowed himself decidedly oppos ed to measures which they believed essential to then prosperity. Now so far as political principal is concerned, it must be admitted that the Northern Whigs have the better side of the case. But so far as the int rests of the town are concerned, it is believed that the Southern Whigs are in the right, and it is believed also, may be owners of Railroad Stock. No one at all acquainted with the business wants of DANVERS can for moment doubt, that a direct and convenient Railroad communication with Boston is indespensable to continued success in business. Vegetable Physanthropic Pills. HE Proprietors take this method of making known to the world the most valuable and important discovery ever recorded in the history of medicine In testing by chemical experiment, the medicinal properties of a rare plant, which grows along the banks of the Wapsepinicon River, in lowa, they discovered that it possessed a healing and restoring power, which in their opinion, in combination with other remedies, the result of their medical researches, would render it a for a suffering world. The remailed powers of this plant were tested with the least possible delay, and in hundreds of instances, they proved fully adopted to the complete and perfect removal of disease in any and every form, and it is confidently believed that the remedy is destined to produce an entire revolution in the medical world. Facts in their possession fully warrant them in making the astounding announcement, that it imagesurably surpasses in its power to uproof and expet disease, every other medicine now known.

THE GREAT REMEDY

has been administered in order to tests its power to vast numbers of prtients, in the most hopeless cases, such as had buffled the skill of the most eminent physicians, and had proved too obstinate to be removed by any of the nu-merous remedies of the day, and to the perfect astonishment of all, it effected complete and permament cures thus brilliantly triumphing, not only over the greatest remedies known to the medical, profession, but over all the Pills, Syrups and Panaceas, whose virtues are so loudly trumpeted throughout the length and breadth of the land

FOR THE COURIER. THE DYING GIRL.

BY A. B. FLANDERS. The night was dark and fearful. The bleak wind whistled wild, A mother sad and tearful, Watched beside her dying child,

And list to the gentle breathings Of the meek and quiet soul As life was fast receding From out its earthly goal.

Come close beside my bed, mother, And smooth my dying brow, Soon shall I be with Augels, Methinks I see them now, Sweet Sister, too I see mother. I can no longer stay, She smiles so sweetly on me, And beckons me away.

Adieu dear mother, dry your tears, For your daughter cease to weep, Wh le constant spirits hov'ring near, Their earthly vigils keep, They bid me come I must be gone, My joy there's none can tell, The earth recedes-my form is cold. Its death-so fare thee well.

> SONG FOR THE SEASON. BY ELIZA COOK.

Look out, look out, there are shadows about; The forest is donning it: doublet of brown, The willow trees with a gloomier flout, Like a beautiful face with a gathering frown! "Fis true we all know that summer must go, That the swallow will never stay long in our caves; Yet we'd rather be watching the wild rose blow, Than be counting the colors of Autumn leaves!

Look high, look high, there's the lace winged fly, Thinking he's king of the fairy realm, As he swings with delight on the gossamer tie, That is linked 'mid the boughs of the sun-tipped elm Alas! poor thing, the first rustle will bring The pillars to dust where your pleasure-clue And many a spirit, like thine will cling To hopes that will depend upon Autumn leaves!

Look low, look low, the night gust's blow, And the restless forms in hectic red, Come whirling and sporting and wherever we go, Lighter in dancing as nearer the dead! Oh! who has not seen rare hearts, that have been Painted and panting, in the garb that deceives, Dashing daily along in their fluttering sheen With despair at the core, like the Autumn leaves!

Look on, look on, morn breaketh upon The hedge-row boughs, in their withering hue; The distant orchards is sallow and wan, But the apple and nut gleam tichly through. Oh, well it will be if our life, like the tree, Shall be found, when old Time of green beauty be-

With the fruitful good works for the Planter to see Shining out in Truth's harvest, through Autumn

Merrily pours, as it sings and soars, The West wind over cloud and seas, Till it plays in the forests and moans and roars, Seeming no longer a mitthful breeze! So music is blest, till it meeteth a breast That is probed by the strain while memory grieves To think it was sung by a loved one at rest, Then it comes like the sweet wind in Autumn leaves

Not an hour are leaf and flower Stricken in freshness swept to decay; By gentle approaches the frost and the shower, Make ready the sap veins for falling away! And so is Man made to as peacefully fade By the tear that he sheds and the sigh that he heaves For he's Toosened from earth by each trial-cloud shade, Till he's willing to go, as the Autumn leaves!

Look back, look back, and you'll find the track Of human hearts, strown thickly o'er With joy's dead leaves all dry and black, And every year still flinging more. But the soil is fed where the branches are shed, For the furrow to bring forth fuller sheaves, And so in our trust in the future spread In the gloom of Mortelity's Autumn leaves!

Miscellann.

His Fingers in the Trap.

Every one, or at least every American, has heard of Banvard, and many have read his adventures, as pubished in the descriptive pamphlets of his great picture of the Mississippi. But he is the hero of an adventure which is not published, and which is rather too good to be lost. It is generally known that he speculated in a variety of ways, on the treacherous Mississippi, to get noney to help him through his project.

One of these speculatious consisted in fitting up a flatout as a museum of paintings, and he floated from town to town, exhibiting these paintings to the inaubitants hereof. He stopped 'for one night only,' at the little and almost deserted town of Commerce, in Mississippi, and can be seen in his panorama, a short distance below Memphis. During the exhibition, there was one man who appeared very consequential, and wanted to know if the prop letor had a license for exhibiting his paintings; he likewise said the 'squire' was out of town, but as he was a citizen of the town, he would assume the responsibility and collect the license himself. Mr. Banvard observed that the exhibition was not in the town, but on the river, and that be had a state license, which gave him the privilege of exhibiting where he pleased within the purisdiction of the state.

'I can't help that,' said the self-appointed magistrate, with all the consequence of a 'real genuine squire.'-·We calculate to have a large town here some of these days, and we want money in our treasury, and as you is making a small sprinklin' off the place, you might as well leave a little on it behind; so fork over the license

Banvard found that he had an ugly customer to deal with, and was so well acquainted with the people of that wild region, that he knew it was best to get off as the whole town at his back, who would be delighted with the 'spree' of 'dornieleing' the hast, and the follow appeared to be a leader among them.

'How much is your license?' said the exhibitor. 'I do n't zackly know, but I suppose I will make it ten dollars.' 'Ten dollars! why, my dear sir, I have only taken about six or eight dollars.' 'Can't help that, I wants the ten dollars, or we good citizens will obflister cate this boat for you. 'But some other 'good citizen' may demand another ten dollars upon the same plea,' observed Banvard. 'I will 'sume the responsibilities of my feller citizens as I am now the only responsible person in the town of

Well, sir, since you assume the responsibility, just sit down and view the painting, and after the exhibition s over, I will pay you your demand; my business calls me at present.

Mr. Consequence then walked into the large room where the exhibition was going on, and Mr. Banvard urned to his hands, and gave them directions to have all the lines on board except the 'bow line,' and to unswing the oar, with poles set ready for starting at a moment's warning, suspecting the fellow would raise a row. After the exhibition was over, and the good citizens began to make tracks for lome, the collector' remained behind and demanded his money.

'Certainly,' said the proprietor, just step back into the cubin with me, and you shall have it; and back he walked as one of the hands was extinguishing the lights used for the paintings. Just as he and Banvard rea ched he little cabin, by some accident Mr. B. contrived to xtinguish the only remaining light, and both were shut n utter darkness. In the meantime all the spectators had left the boat, and she swung back and forth, being was rushing fariously by her. It was the intention of trace it out. The best steel gravers the harder the bet-Banvard to cast the line loose as soon as the last spectawould be a fine joke to tell, should he cut her loose .-This fellow, not aware that the would-be-magistrate was on board, out with his bowie knife, severed the line, and ran off. The hands on the bow, perceiving the boat dropping astern, suspected what was done, taking hold of the line, found it cut; they immediately drew what remained of it on board, poled the boat off noiselessly into the current, and all on board were rapidly floating off on the dark bosom of the Mississippi, at the rate of six miles an hour. While this was transpiring at the bow of the boat. Banvard was creating as much delay as possible, hunting about for materials to strike a light, in order to detain Mr. Consequence, Mr. B. knowing the boat was affoat, as he left orders to cast her off when he got this fellow back in the cabin; but he was not aware that one of the 'good cirizens' had put them off by cutting the bow lines.

Come, make haste,' said Consequence, after Mr. B. had at last succeeded in re-lighting his lamp. want them 'ere ten dollars in a horry.'

Certainly, sir, as soon as I find the key to my trunk You see, sir, my receipts are only eight dollars to-night, and I must get from my trunk the balance of the money Can you change a twenty dollar bill?" Well, I can, hoss. I got to go to court to-morrow, and I just put that sum into my pocket; hand over your

of the rat.

'Never mind the key; just hand me over the eight dollars you have, and let the balance go; we will not quarrel about trifles. Do you hear? or I will have the town about your ears.'

'Yes, I hear,' said Banvard, as he reached over the head of his berth, and coolly took down a pair of revolving pistols. The follow, seeing this, retreated toward the door, shouting out, 'Hollo, ashore there.' 'You will have to call a little loader than that to be heard at town,' responded one of Mr. B.'s men on the bow of the boat, 'for, as I take it, we are now about one and a half miles below.' 'Why did n't you let me know you were going?' said consequence, his arder a little cooled, when he found the boat affoat, and himself trapped. 'Why did n't we let you know?' why, for a very ood reason, we did n't know ourselves. One of your good citizens, as you call them, cut our line loose before we knew it.' replied the man. 'What line?' inquired Banvard, 'the new one I bought n Memphis last week?' 'Yes, sir,' replied several of the hands at the same

'Put me ashore,' shouted the would be dignitary. 'Not until you pay me damages for my line, which ome of your good citizens cut for me,' answered Banard. 'You said you would be responsible for their acts, and that you were the only responsible person in town. My line cost me fifteen dollars; you say I owe on ten, now pay me five, end we will be even; and then I will have you put ashore.'

But, sir,' rejoined the man, do not take me off.] have a sult pending, and I shall lose it if I am not there to see to tt. Put me ashore, and I will say nothing about the license

Well, sir, step toward the light and get the five dollars; and taking out his pocket-book, Consequence stepped to the light and gave the five dollars, when Mr. B. gave orders to have him set ashore. THE ART OF CAMEO ENGRAVING.

The art of cutting Cameo, is a species of sculpture rather than engraving. There are two sorts of cameos, one of which is stone of different colored strata, so that the raised figure is of a different color from the ground. The other is of conch shell, of which lime is the basis .-The shells are sawed in squares with saws of soft iron, similar to those used by sculptors. After the shells are cut into suitable peices they are ground on a stone to their required shapes, by grinding them nicely on the pacity of the tree to bring to maturity, or for its branchedges and leaving them thick in the middle. After this es to sustain, should the fruit come to its usual growth. they must be cemented on a stick about 6 or 7 inches If so, by means of high step-ladders, constructed so as long, with a cement of Burgundy pitch and rosin of equal to sustain a person among the higher or lower branches

AGE OF POULTRY.

Farmers usually sell poultry alive, excepting in some parts of the country, such as the Borders, where geese are killed and plucked for the sake of their feathers before being sent to at tket. Poulterers in towns, on the other hand, kill and pluck every sort of fowl for sale, so you $3,000. that the purchashers has it in his power to judge of the carcass; and if he buys an inferior article at a high price it must be his own fault. It is easy to judge of a plucked fowl, whether old or young by the state of the legs. If a hen's spur is hard, and the scales on the legs rough, she is old, whether you see her head or not; but the head will corroborate your observation, if the under bill is so stiff that you cannot bend it down, and the comb thick and rough. A young hen has only the rudiments of spurs, the scales on the legs smooth, glossy and fresh colored, whatever the color may be, the claws tender and short, the under bill soft, and the comb thin and smooth. An old hen turkey has rough scales on the legs, callosities on the soles of the feet and long strong claws; a young one the reverse of all these marks. When the feathers are on, and the old turkey-cock has a long beard, a young one but a sprouting one; and when they are off the smooth scales on the legs decide the point, wings, particularly at the pinions, the thickness and strength of the bill, and the firmness and thickness of the forthers; and when placked, by the legs, pinions and bill, and the coarseness of the skin. Ducks are distinguished by the same means, but there is this difference, that a duckling's bill is much longer in proportion to the breadth of its head than old ducks. A young pigeon is mong the feathers. A pigeon that can fly has always red Stephen's Book of the Farm.

SYMPATHY OF BIRDS. A gentleman of our acpaintance a week or two since remarked an unusual collecting of brown thrush is a thicket contiguous to his residence. His attention having been drawn towards them for several successive days, by their load cries and eccentric movements, he was at length induced to investigate more closely the cause of this unwonted conress of his feathered tenants, and ascertain if possible the cause of their excitement. Upon examining the thicket, he discovered a female thrush suspended by one wing to a limb. Near by was her nest containing several half grown birds.

From the attendant circumstances he concluded that the maternal bird must have become entangled before the process of incubation was completed and that some kindly hearted neighbor had supplied her place in hatching and breeding her callow offspring. He withdrew # few rods, and the committee of relief immediately resumed the self-imposed duty of administering 'aid and comfort' in the form of worms and other insects, alternating between the mother and her young-she meanwhile cheering them on in their labor of love with the peculiar note which first led to the discovery of her situation.

Having watched this exhibition of charity for some half hour, our informant relieved the mother bird. Sh. immediately flew to her nest, expressing her gratitude by her sweetest notes. Her charitable friends, their occupation now being gone,' (as the Police Reporter says) dispersed to their respective places of abode, singing as they went a song of joy.

Vegetable Physanthropic Pills. HE Proprietors take this method of making known to the world the most valuable and important discovery ever recorded in the history of medicine.

In testing by chemical experiment, the medicinal properties of a rare plant, which grows along the banks of the Wapsepinicon River, in lowa, they discovered that it possessed a healing and restoring power, which in their opinion, in combination with other remedies, the result of their mudical resourches, wound render it a their medical researches, would render it a for a suffering world." The reme lial powers of this plant were tested with the least possible delay, and in hundreds of instances, they proved fully adequate to the complete and perfect removal of disease in any and every form, and it is conflictedly helived that the remedy is destined to produce an entire revolution in the medical world. Facts in their possession fully warrant them in making the as-oun ling announcement, that it immeasurably surpasses in its pover to uproof and expet disease, every other medicine now known.

has been administered in order to tests its power to vast numbers of patients, in the most hopeless cases, such as had baffled the skill of the most connent physicians, and had proved too obstinate to be removed by any of the numerous remedies of the day, and to the perfect astonishment of all, it effected complete and permanent cures; thus brilliantly trumphing, not only over the greatest remedies known to the medical, profession, but over all the Pills, Syrups and Panaceas, whose virtues are so loudly trampeted throughout the length and breadth of the land.

FOR THE COURIER. MY FOREST HOME.

BY A B. FLANDERS.

That name, -how delightful my sweet Forest Home, The place of my earliest dreams, How oft 'mid the flowers of the wild woods I've roamed And scaled the hold (Saurel) at the wild Eagle's scream.

The Cottage with roses and jessamine twined, How majestic and stately the trees, While the song of the bird and the zephyr combined, Hath lailed me to sleep while fanned by the breeze.

But where are those scenes, the sweet haleyon of rest, Alas! forever and aye they have flown, While the grey headed sire, the matron who blest, Have here now no Cottage-but in heaven a home.

That old Cottage Bible hatly gone from its place, The song of devotion bath ceased, While he that hath oft invoked blessing and grace, Hath left us and fled to the mansions of peace.

Farewell to the Cottage, the garden of flowers. No more 'midst thy beauty and fragrance I roam; But my mind will return to the song of the bowers, And sigh for the comforts of my sweet Forest Home.

GO AHEAD.

BY GEO. W. LIGHT. When your plans of life are clear, Go ahead-Cut no faster than your brains: Haste is always in the rear; If dame prudence has the reins, Go ahead.

Do you ask too broad a test:

Go ahead.

Go ahead. Lagging never clears the sight: When you do your duty best, You will best know what is right.

Never doubt a righteous cause: Go ahead; Throw yourself completely in: Conscience shaping all your laws, Manfully, through thick and thin, Go ahead.

Do not ask who'll go with you;

Numbers! spurn the coward's plea! If there be but one or two, Single-handed, though it be, Go ahead!

Though before you mountains rise, Go ahead:

Scale them ?- certainly you can: Let them proudly dare the skies; What are mountains to a man! Go ahead.

Though fierce waters round you dash, Go ahead: Let no hardships baffle you: Though the heavens roar and flash,

Still, undaunted, firm and true, Go ahead. Heed not Mammon's golden bell:

Go ahead; Make no compromise with sin: Tell the serpent he looks well, But you cannot let him in. Go ahead.

Better days are drawing nigh; Go ahead; Making duty all your pride, You must prosper live or die, For all Heaven's on your side, Go ahead.

You never saw a great display of finery-such pearance as a splendid bride for one short eveningespecially as I am to see no strangers ?

'There is something in that. There is Maria's wedding dress. She will never wear it again in the world. She had a white satin with a lace dress over it. Oh, she did look beautifully! I do admire to see a handsome

She serviceable for some years. But come; put on your bonnet and step over to our new house. It is all finished, at least all that is furnished; I value it more highly than I should if it was not so near my mother's.'

'There, William has left this small parlor, this sitting room, and three chambers, to finish at his leisure when he is out of employment. See how every thing is arranged—so handy for my work.'

'You don't say you are going to do your own work?' ·Certainly I do. There is only one apprentice, and should think it strange if I could not do it all with be sure, it is well enough if you can only bring your mind to it, but then folks do so differently now-a-days. There's my Maria, she has moved into an elegant house all furnished from top to bottom. She keeps a great girl to do the work, and a little one to wait and tend. Oh. things do go on beautifully, I promise you.'

Her husband is a lawyer, is he not?-is he very wealthy 'Oh, he is well off. He does not get much practice yet, but I dure say he will in time. Maria never would have married a mechanic, their hands get so hard and black, and their complexions, especially if they are exposed, get so brown; I would not wish to hurt your feelings, but do wish for the bride's sake, for the sake of the family, you might have made a little different choice. 'Oh, aunt, excuse my laughing-I have yet to learn that a man's honest occupation, whether it produces hard hands, or soft white hands, whether it gives the cheek a brown or pale hue, is any disparagement to him. You must get acquainted with William and hear him converse. You will not think of his hard hand, and his animated, intelligent countenance will drive his bronzed skin quite out of your head. But come, you don't say any thing about my furniture-and you must see my nice closets.3

Oh! your farniture is well enough. The less you have, the less you will have to take care of.'

'Yes, we could not get much furniture. I insisted upon William's taking the money my grandmother left [Sings] me, to pay off a few hundred dollars which he owed for this place, in order to enable us to begin even with the world. We both have such a horror of debt that we are determined never to incur any, if we can possibly help it. See what a nice press for clothes here is.'

'Why, what a quantity of bed and table linen-it is really nice, too: You have more than my Maria has, 1 | Say mister I'll bet that story's as flat as a pancake!' de clare.'

'Yes, I always want an abundance of such things .-The drawer is filled with towels-this is for my ironing cloth and blanket, and this closet contains my tin and wooden ware.'

'I declare, Eliza, you are a strange, thoughtful child. I must tell you one thing about Maria, that made us give a good hearty laugh. The Monday morning after she was married, the girl came to ask where the tubs were, and don't you think the child had actually forgotten to buy a tub, clothes-line, or pins. She said it never popped into her head. But la, it wasn't strange, she had never been used to anything of the kind.'

I believe, aunt, that I have shown you all now. We will go if you please. I hope you will not let my brown dress, or William's brown hands frighten you away this ·Oh, no! but I must take the stage for Maria's early in the morning; you must allow me to retire early.

What fellows these Yankees are for combining elegance and usefulness,' said a Southern gentleman to himself, as he stood on the piazza of the hotel, in the town of _____. 'Sir,' said he, addressing himself to a venerable looking man near him, can you tell me who resides in that elegant cottage, where the grounds are laid out with so much taste?' Oh, that is squire Bill Thorndike's. You must be a stranger in these parts not to know HIM.' I am, sir; and since he seems such a prominent member of society, I would be happy to know something of his history.'

Oh, there is nothing remarkable in it, not at all, sir His father was a man of great learning, but he nearly run through a fortune, by trying to live m style. He died and left three boys. Their mother, who went from this place, was a woman of strong sense. She sold the property, paid off the debts, and had enough to buy that ittile house to the left. She was other men, but somehow the money increased as laces, and flounces and furbelows. You never say him before he kept a horse, riding much for pleasure. No they both pulled one way, and took their pleasure in being sober, industrious and useful, and now they reap their reward in being universally respected. Why, there ain't a man that has so much money to let as Squire Thorndike, and he is never hard and screwing about it as some are. He has taken two children if one lawyer Willis to bring up and he does as well by them as he does by his own. Lawyer Willis's wife was a dashy, showy gal. Lord! you'd ha' thought the richest folks on arth were married when they got the knot tied. Poor fellow! he had a hard time; notwithstanding, to support his wife in style, He took to drink and died. I've heard say that she turned up her nose at her cousin's match, but she little thought that her boys would be glad to go to the same cousin for a home, while she would be glad to take the house that

HOW HE SWALLOWED THE WRONG MEDICINE Dr. Chamberlain, from his skill in treating disease in Mexico, together with his surgical ability, so signally lisplayed at Monterey and Buena Vista, has won from the volunteers the sobriquet of 'Old Medicine.' He has been appointed surgical director of this division of the forces, and was, at the time we write of, on his visit to camp. After the evening parade, Col. Williams very politely invited us all into his marque, to 'take something,' A general introduction to several officers took place, and when Col. Eradbary was mentioned there was considerable of a flutter at his rank, but he immediately calmed it down by saying-

'No fighting Colonel, gentlemen!' Caps were easy on military heads at this announcenent. Col. W. called his boy to clean glasses for the guests, and while this operation was proceeding, Bradbury stepped out into a company of the boys, and offered to throw any of the crowd, side hold, just for the honor of Ohio. Kentucky snatched at his offer; but, while the preliminaries were being seitled, the Colonel was summoned away to drink. On an inspection of Col. W.'s liquor chest, it was discovered that all of the first tier of bottles had been cleared; resort was had to the her body, instead of being burned where he could make second, where, he said, was hid away some fine wines periodical pilgrimages to it, and plant flowers around it, and cordials. Some person handed the doctor one of the bottles, which, on smelling. he pronounced black- again set it in a rapid motion. He hurried out to the berry cordial; Bradbury agreed with him, and it being a nice, innocent dram, the doctor poured out half a gill, put in a little water, and tossed it off. He puckered up male called Mrs Farrell, which he quickly took and inhis mouth at the taste, but politely said nothing against terred. the liquor. Brad. tasted three fingers' depth of it next, and he immediately assumed an attitude something like Macbeth, when he sees the bloody form of Banquo, at the banquet.

'Who hath done this?' shouted the Colonel, his face

'Done what?' exclaimed everybody, mounting to their feet.

'Poisoned me,' shouted Brad. 'I've drank laudanum enough to kill my whole regiment.'

Wife.

An incident, serious in itself, though at the same time laughably ludicrous, lately occurred in New Orleans .-There lived in Barone street, and indeed there lives there still, a poor but industrious couple-Frank Farrel and his wife Mary. If Frank were to die, his excessive wealth, at least, would not preclude the possibility of his and habis of industry, which secure health and afford him the means to supply his wants which are but few! He follows the business of dying-renovating (11 garnents-or in other words. Like a practical moralist improving the current generation; in fact he dyes to live .-Phough a man of known veracity, he gives a coloring to almost everything he touches; and although of strictly abstentious habits, he is frequently seen blue.

Not long since, Mary took the yellow fever, anl Frank being strongly advised to send her to one of the pay-wards of the Charity Hospital, where she would nave the best advice, and medical attendance, he did so. For two days, on which he called to see her several imes, her case continued to be a dangerous one, and Frank remained in a state of suspence, lest her whom he so dearly loved should pass out of existence. On the night of the second day, the physician thought he saw symptoms of improvement, as if the crisis of the case had been past; and this was an announcement which Frank bailed with all the gratification inspired by sincere affection. He went home to his humble residence, and that night had pleasurable and bright dreams about Mary, happy days and a better fortune.

Early in the morning a message came to him from the ho-pital that Mary was dead-that she died at one o'+ clock in the morning-that her corpse was in the dead house, and if it was not taken away before the doctors came they would dissect it. This sad news froze for a noment life's current in Frank's heart, but the idea of being subjected to the scalpel of the unfeeling surgeon, undertaker's, procured a hearse and coffin, went directly to the dead house, where he found the corpse of a fe-

SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 27, 1847.

SECRETARY OF STATE. Among the many distinguished gentlemen named candidates for this office, we notice two natives of the County of Essex. Hon. ALLEN W. DODGE, of Hamilton, and Rev. Joseph B. Felt, now of Boston .-Mr. Felt we have long known as a worthy and excellent man. His intimate acquaintance with all documents pertaining to the concerns of the State, must be a valuable acquisition in this office. Mr. Dodge we know to be an energetic, active, efficient man, well qualified to discharge with good ability any duties to which he may be called. We hope that as the County of Essex came off second best in the Gubernatorial con-humble aspirations for the Secretaryship.

CAUTION We have received from the proprietor of a shop on Main street, an advertisement, in which he complains of the conduct of three young ladies,? whose names are therein stated, who commit nearly every evening, offences which are alike disgraceful to themselves and their parents or guardians, such as "opening shop-doors, thumping and throwing stones, against windows, (in one instance having broken three panes) screaming and yelling like wild cats." These are the grievances set firth and this is not the first time that complaints of this nature have come to us, with a request that we would notice them. By our desire, the advertiser has been persuaded to postpone the publication of his advertisement above named, to enable us to give this timely caution to all concerned. His only desire is to stop this intolerable nuisance. If this notice as agricultural products, that could best be taken to does not have that effect, we shall feel compelled to comply with his request.

In connection with the above, we would suggest t parents, the necessity of exercising a vigilant watch over the habits and conduct of their children. Instances o the youthful deprevity and immoral practices of some young masters and misses in our neighborhood, have come to our ear, which would disgust and alarm a respectable community.

FOR THE COURIER THE DEPARTED ONE. BY A. B. FLANDERS.

----Lay het i' the earth, And from her tair and unpolluted flesh, May violets spring! -- [SHAKSPEARE. Aye, lay her in the silent grave, The fair, unspotted one. Near where the fragrant myrtle waves. And sheds its sweetness o'er the graves, Of Father. Brother, Son.

Aye lay her where the daisies bloom. The lovely lily hangs its head, Where the feathered quoir sings o'er her tomb, And mourn'st that beauty fades so soon, As with the hallowed dead, Lav her where the ivy clings, With fond embrace the circling vines. Twines round her tomb-its leafy wings In concert with the sighing winds, Mourn o'er fair beauty's shrine.

We lay thee loved one by the side. Of those thou held most dear. And joy to think unhallowed pride Together with affliction's tide Can ne'er endanger here.

> From the Utica Observer. THE WHEEL OF LIFE.

I sat beside a cottage hearth, A wheel was standing near-A little infant whirled it round. Then startled back in fear.

Methought the mystic Wheel of Life Was whirled by that fair child, And fast the ever-lengthening cord Was on the spindle piled.

Time, standing near with clicking reel Was counting off the chain; And every month he tied a knot. And every year a skein.

At first the thread was smooth and white No spot or wrinkle there-For Innocence the wheel did turn, For Life's immortal heir, Soon coarser grew the rolling thread-Uneven grew the skein; And Passion with its crimson dye, Began to leave its stain.

And louder yet the spindle whirled, And quick the wheel flew round, And fast upon the spool of Life

The thread the spinner wound. She sang a fairy-echo song Which maidens love to sing; As turned the wheel, she little dreamed

What magic it would bring. The ever sunny tinge of Love Entwined its golden hue,

And sweeter then the maiden sang, And soft the spindle flew. Lo! ruby emerald, purple tints!

'Twas Hope prepared the dye, And Fancy drew the picture rare, On which the colors lie.

A little space of Iris dye, Then dark the colors grew; The spinner works with restless hand, And tears the skein bedew.

The flaws grow thicker, and the rolls Are broken here and there; The thread has lost its even gloss, Beneath the touch of Care.

The marring knot of self is seen, And doubt its mildew leaves; So oft Affliction strains the thread, The weary spinner grieves,

But, lo! the rolls are almost spun, And Death, he brings the knife And cuts the band which binds the wheel, Thus ends the thread of Life!

These skeins! oh, may their every thread A cleansing undergo, And whitened by the blood of Christ. Be bleached as white as snow.

'Yes, he's the man,' And immediately writing a note, despatched it by his office messenger. In twenty minutes a well dressed man entered, and bowed to the lawyer with a respectful or rather deferential sir,

'Take a chair, Jones-I want to talk to you,' said !

The man seated himself. 'You know we've managed to get confoundedly in debt with our new church.

'Yes; so it seems,' was the assenting reply. 'And some how or other we must manage to get out of debt.'

Vegetable Phy anthropic Pills. THE Proprietors take this method of making known to the world the most valuable and important discovery ever recorded in the history of medicine. In testing by chemical experiment, the medicinal properties of a rare plant, which grows along the banks of the Wapsepinicon River, in lown, they discovered that it possessed a healing and restoring power, which in their opinion, in combination with other remedies, the result of their medical researches, would render it a or a suffering world. The remedial powers of this plant were tested with the least possible delay, and in hundreds of instances, they proved fully adequate to the complete and perfect removal of disease in any and every form, and it is confidently beleived that the remedy is destined to produce an entire revolution in the medical world. Facts in their possession fully warrant them in making the astounding announcement, that it immeasurably surpasses in its power to uproot and expe' disease, every other medical world. Speak kindly to the little child, Lest from his heart you drive away, The light of Love whose visions wild Are opening like the dawn of day; Force not one cloud across the heaven A God of Love to him hath given.

In the deep chambers of the soul To guilt there's no approving sound,-But ever heard, with fearful roll, Stern truth's rebukes are echoing round And ever deeper is their mean, As conscience feels the vice her own.

THE TEAR.—Buton. When Friendship or Love Our sympathies move, When Truth in a glance should appear The lips may begule With a dimple or smile, But the test of affection's a Tear.

Mild Charity's glew, To us mortals below, Shows the soul from barbarity clear, Compassion will melt Where this virtue is felt, And its dew is diffused in a tear. The man doom'd to sail

With the blast of the gale, Through billows Atlantic to steer, As he ben soe'r the wave Which may soon be his grave, The green sparkles bright with a Tear. The soldier braves death

For a fanciful wreath,

But he raises the foe When in battle hid low,

In Glory's romantic career;

And bothes every wound with a Tear. If with high-hounding pride He returns to his bride, Reno une ng h s gore-crim-o'nd spear, All h s toils are repaid While embracing the maid, From her eyelid he kisses the Tear.

When my soul wings her flight To the regions of night, And my corse shall recline on its bler, As we pass by the temb Where my ashes consume, Oh! moisten their dust with a Tear. May no marble bestow

THE TEAR .- Byron.

When Friendship or Love Our sympathies move, When Truth in a glance should appear, The lips may beguile With a dimple or smile, But the test of affection's a Tear.

Mild Charity's glow, To us mortals below, Shows the soul from barbarity clear, Compassion will melt Where this virtue is felt. And its dew is diffused in a tear.

The man doom'd to sail With the blast of the gale, Through billows Atlantic to steer, As he bends oe'r the wave Which may soon be his grave, The green sparkles bright with a Tear.

The soldier braves death For a fanciful wreath, In Glory's romantic career; But he raises the foe When in battle laid low, And bothes every wound with a Tear.

If with high-bounding pride He returns to his bride, Reno uncing his gore-crimso'nd spear, All his toils are repaid While embracing the maid, From her eyelid he kisses the Tear.

When my soul wings her flight To the regions of night, Anh my corse shall recline on its bier, As ye pass by the tomb Where my ashes consume, Oh! moisten their dust with a Tear.

May no marble bestow The splendor of woe Which the children of vanity rear; No fiction of fame Shall blazon my name, All I ask-all I wish-is a Tear.

At length, wearied by importunity, Washington-then twenty years before his greatness-leaned over the table, played with his glass, attempted to look unconcerned, and whispered to Mr. Robinson the single word 'Mary.' 'Yes?' responded Mr. R. interrogatively, as if unable to comprehend Washington's meaning. 'Is she well? Does she still abide with you?' 'She does,' replied the lady of the mansion.

Washington again became apathetic and contemplalive, while several significant glances passed between the gentleman and his wife. Some five minutes were spent in perfect silence, which was only interrupted by the exit of Mrs. R. from the apartment. The young lady was Mary Phillipse, sister of Mrs. Robinson and daughter of the owner of the Phillipse

It was perhaps singular; but the time of her appearance and the period of the return of Washington's cordiality, was identical. Strange as it was, too, midnight found this young lady and the Virginia colonel alone and in deep conversation. The conjugal train who had kept them company in the early part of the evening had retired to their bed-chamber. More remarkable than all, daylight found this couple still together. What could have prolonged that interview .-Not mutual love; for the parties preserved a ceremonious distance and the young lady evinced a hauteur that could be matched only by her companion in after years. And yet the truth must be told. There was love on one side; the colonel smitten by the graces and rare accomplishments of a lady as beautiful as nature's rarest works, was endeavoring to win her heart in exchange for his own. He made his confession just as the cold grey of the dawn of morning broke up the dark clouds in the east, He confessed, in cautious and measured terms, it is true, the extent of his passion and avowed what it was his earnest hope would be the result: The lady hesitated. Was it the modesty of the maiden who dares not to trust her lips with the confession of affection it is her heart's desire to make? No! She respected, although she did not love her interlocutor, and she felt diffident in making known to him the true state of her feelings. At last candor triumphed over delicacy, and she informed Washington in set terms that she loved another! She refused him! The greatest shines like a rich gem in the pages of the world's his-

Instantly a great party—whichever party happens so strong is the instinct of party allegiance—and then, forsooth, the pulpit must be silent, because it is a political question! My pulpit will not be silent on moral questions, then or now—as long as I have the faculty of moral discrimination I speak against the war today because I have set to myself the task of pleading the cause of the poor, who have got to bear the burden ultimately." We trust that Governor Dana of Maine will weigh the force of these remarks before he pens another thanksgiving proclamation. The clergymen, (if there were any,) who succumbed to his recommendation, must have been of as accommodating a spiritas the country manager, who announced the performance of the tragedy of Hamlet at the theatre, with the part

> DEATH OF GEORGE H. COLTON. This gentleman, well know as the proprietor and editor of the American (Whig) Review, died at his residence in Park Place, New York, last Wednesday evening, about eight o'clock. He had been ill for more than a month of typhus fever. The N. Y. Commercial Advertiser says he was in the twenty-ninth year of his age, a gentleman of respectable talents and attainments, and his future career was promising. His personal friends were warmly attached en, a portion of his family being residents there.

THE WEATHER. The Boston Traveller publishes letter from Franconia, N. H., which states that on Monday at sunrise, the thermometer indicated 10 de_ grees, and on Tuesday morning at sunrise 8 degrees.-But this weather was betten at Brinton, Vt., according to the Voice of Freedom. published at that place, which says that on Monday nt 4 P. AIR-LINE RAILWAY TO NEW YORK. We notice with pleasure that the capital stock of the New York and Bo ton Railroad, having exceeded the sum required by the Charter for the organization of the Company, the Corporators have given notice that the subscription books are closed until after the organization of the Compuny, and that the first meeting of the Stockholders will be held in the city of Middletown, on Thursday, the 16th day of December inst, at 10 o'clock A. M. for the choice of Directors of the Company.

We learn, says the Journal of Commerce, that the mount subscribed exceeds that required (500,000) by several thousand dollars. The public confidence is so great in the success of this project, that no difficulty has been experienced, notwithstanding an unusual degree of pressure and embarrassment in the money market, in obtaining subscriptions. Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla. THE MOST EXTRAORDINARY MEDICINE IN THE WORLD.

IN THE WORLD.

THIS extract is put up in quart bottles; it is six times cheaper, pleasanter and warranted. Superior to any soid. It cures diseases without vomiting, purging, sickering or debiliteting the patient.

The great benaty and superiority of this Sursaparılla over all other Medicines is, while it eradicates diseases to invigorates the body. It not only purfies the whole system and strengthous the person but it creates new, pure, and rich filood; a power possessed by no other medicine. And in this lies the grand-secret of success it has performed within the last two years, more than a soil of cases in the city of New York which we will refer to with piecsure, and to me of character.

has been administered in order to tests its power to vast numbers of patients, in the most hopeless cases, such as had baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians, and had proved too obstinate to be removed by any of the nu-merous emedies of the day, and to the perfect astonish-ment of all, it effected complete and permament cures; thus brilliantly triumphing, not only over the greatest rem-edies known to the mediant perfect is here all the edies known to the medical, profession, but over all the Pills, Syrups and Panaceas, whose virtues are so loudly trumpeted throughout the length and breadth of the land.

AS A GENERAL FAMILY MEDICINE,

DR, J. A. ROBINSON.

SURGEON DENTIST,

SALEM,

VOULD respectfully give notice that he has removed from his old stand, oposite the City Hall, to No 20 Washington street, recently occupied by A. E. Phillips, where he is ready to perform all operation in Dentistry, in a most thorough and work-manlike manner His experience and success in inserting whole sets either by atmospheric pressure or springs, enables him to furnsh them at rates which cannot fail to suit those in want of an article of superior quality.

His method of inserting Teeth, both singly and on plate with or without Gums, has been found to be satisfactory and successful as combining beauty of finish and adaptation, with all the requisits of mastication and articulation.

Particular attention paid to filling Teeth so as to render them serviceable for many years and sleet the respective forms and convulsions, cancerous Sores and Ulcers, Dropsy, Dysentery, Epilipay, Erysipelas, English, Salt-Rheum, Fever and Ague, Female Complaints, Fevers of all kinds, Gravel, Gout, Hysterics, Indian mation of the Liver, Lungs, Kidneys and Bladder, In Hammation of the Heart, Piles, Scrofula, Spinal Complaint, Salt-Rheum, Scald Head, Syphilis, Suppression of the Mennese, Tic Douloureux, &c. The proprietors have the Mennese, Tic Douloureux, &c. The proprietors have the Mennese that it has failed in a single instance of effecting a cure.

AS A PREVENTATIVE

of disease, it is entitled to the fullest confidence of the community. An immense amount of suffering, time and money has been saved by a timely use of it. It has already crossed the Atlantic, and measures ar now in progress to extend the blessings of this GREAT REMEDY throughout the world.

A hacking cough constantly annoyed me! Boston, Mass.,) June 1st; 1844

Sir,-In February last, I took a sudden cold, after which a hacking cough constantly annoyed me, and this, combined with my other maladies, rendered me truly miserable, as everybody told me that I was in a con sumption. Since, I have taken LORRAINE'S PILLS and now every body tells me that I am well;—I feel as well as ever I did.

J. E. S. McKEY.

Portland, Me., Nov. 7th, 1843 Sir. Please send us one gross of Lorraine's Pills, we have sold all we had last. They have given very good satisfaction, better than any other pills which we have in our market. I think in a short time they will take the place of others. We have had no fault found with them whatever; but, on the contra ry, they have been praised loudly. I think we could have quite a number of highly respectable cer ificates from our citizens.

Respectfully yours, E. MASON:

Chelsea. Jan- 3d, 1844 Sir I transmit to you an account of my case for Str Itraining to you an account of my case for publication, believing it to be my duty. I have been confined with the Rheumatism nearly the whole winter, have had some of the best physicians of Boston and could get nothing that would relieve me more ian temporarily. I heard of the wonderful virtues f Lorraine's Pills, I nad no faith whatever, but 1

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habiteff me, and I have remained well ever since.

N. B. I never took more than one pill at a time indicated in the such instruments in often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habited in properly fitting them; on The proprietors invite the sick to try a single box, and the brain or vital organs. My pains were violent—they fried assured that they will be perfectly satisfied with the entire truthfulness of their representations.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser. A COLD IN THE HEAD.

A cold in the head! What need be said Uglier, stupider, more ill-bred; /I nost a y ther disease May be romantic, if you please; If you have a fever, you're laid on the shelf To be sure-but then you pity yourself. And your friends' anxiety highly excited, The curtains are drawn, and the chamber lighted Dimly and sofily, pleasanter far, Than the staring sunshine that seems to jar Every nerve with a separate knock, And at all our mortal calamities mock.

> As bad as it seems, To be steadily, cleverly, nicely sick; Talk as you please, In certain degrees. Every one likes to take their ease, Likes to be tended and nicely fed, Petted and waited on, and put to bed. And got up in the morning carefully, Like a lord or lady of high degree.

It's not by no means

But a cold in the head! Your eyes are red, Your upper lip is all swelled and spread, You talk in a tone, most unlike your own, A mixture of snuffle and sneeze and groan : Your head aches, your eyes smart, you haven't a thought

That can comfort or rouse You, or profit you aught. You think of what Aaron once offered to Moses, And wished he'd agreed to the cession of noses; He cared too much for the fashion, to think What a comfort t'would be on this shivering brink Of Greenland and Iceland, New England y'clept, If we had not the noses his negative kept.

Who do you suppose Ever pitied a man for blowing his nose? Yet what minor trial could ever be worse, Unless it be reading this blundering verse, Never fit to be written or read, No-nor said,

Except by a man with a cold in his head.

From the Lady's Book. SHALL I BE GRAY? BY T. HEMSTEAD.

When a few more Springs have bloomed and passed Our hills and vales among, And the Autumn winds o'er the grave of flowers A few more dirges sung; When each scene that was dear to my youthful eyes Shall grow dim in the after day, And my soul shall pant for the pathless skies, Oh, tell me, shall I be gray?

When they who were dear to this heart of mine Have lest me, one by one, And the forms that I loved as a mother loves, Are cold 'neath the church-yard stone; When each youthful joy it was mine to share, As a tale hath passed away, And earth is 'reft of its early charms, Oh tell me, shall I be gray?

When I shall stray by the ancient wall, And beneath the spreading yew, Where youthful love with ardent hand Its rude memorials drew: While I search in vain for some cherished trace Of those that have passed away As the much-loved name from the hoary trunk Oh, tell me, shall I be gray?

When life, grown old, no longer wears The hues it earliest wore, And my heart shall yearn for the light of eyes I may meet on earth no more; When this brow of mine hath other lines Than it wore in my early day, And my eye is dim with the mists of time, I know that I shall be gray!

CAN'T GET ALONG.

'I don't know how it is,' said Felix Hall, that some paople can get along so completely on a thousand dollar a year. We can't do it.'

'I'm sure I try to economize all I can,' returned Mrs. | keep one girl, and do nearly all my sewing.

'I do not blame you, Harriet,' said Mr Hall: I know you work hard-too hard-I often wish it was easier for you. But what can I do? My salary is only a thousand dollars. And yet that is all Hawkins receives, -and he seems to get along smoothly. He lays by-so I am told -a cool hundred every year.'

'I don't see how they do it,' replied Mrs Hall. know Mrs Hawkins does not labor half so hard as I do, though her house is always in better order than mine.-They have better furniture than we have, and I am sure Mrs Hawkins clothes' cost double what mine do. 1 don't think it is my fault.'

'I don't say it is, Harriet. I believe you do your part the best you know how. But something must be wrong somewhere. Other people can live very well on a thousand dollars, while we are always owing bills to this, ^that and to the other. Here is the quarter's bills for groceries, amounting to sixty-five dollars, and I seventy to my tailor besides. Then there is an unsettled bill at the provision store of fifteen or twenty dollars, besides the rent, bread bill and milk bill, and I don't know how ma-

'I wish these bills were not allowed to run on; I am sure it would be a great deal better to pay for everything

'So it would, but we have no money to do it with. It takes nearly my whole quarter's salary, regularly, to pay off the bills of three months, and then there is no way to live but-to go on trust for almost everything for three months longer. It is a bad system, I know, but there appears to be no help for it.'

And in the full conviction that there was no help for i Mr Hall drew his quarter's salary of two hundred and fifty dollars, and paid off bills and borrowed-money debts to the amount of two hundred dollars. Then, after giving his wife ten dollars for the purchase of small articles, he started on a new quarter with but forty dol dollars of debts, there was almost as much more hanging over him. He was almost di couraged.

Mr Hall was a clerk in a bank, where he was engaged regularly, from eight in the morning until four-someimes later-in the afternoon. He lived in a house for which he paid two hundred dollars a year, and hi s tailor received annually about one hundred and fifty dollars of his income. He carried a gold watch that had cost eighty dollars, and wore a chain for which he paid forty. He also indulged in one or two expensive breast-pins. and before his family had become as large as at present, had spent a good deal of money in jewerly for his wife. But the dropping in of one child after another until the number grew to five, interfered with these little in dulgences very materially, and called so loudly for self-de. nial that the appeal could not be entirely disregarded.

But the self-denial, as is usually the case, was pretty much all on one side. Mrs Hall denied herself almos very thing, while he went on, in most things, about the same as he did when he and his wife paid eight dollars a week for their boarding, with just the same income they had at present. But let us look a little more closely in his way of doing things, and see if it is possible to discov at what appeared so great a mystery to him.

On the day after Mr. Hall had spoken to his wife so despondingly, he spent, for tobacco and cigars, eighteen and three-quarters cents; for a luncheon and a glass of n toys for the children, fifty cents. He also bought a nottle of wine, for which he paid seventy-five cents .-quarter cents in a single day. On the third day, he hired a thereby save about sixty dollars a year.' chaise and rode out with his family, after he had left the bank in the afternoon. The chaise-bire was a dollar and a half, and tolls and refreshments fifty cents more.— Already, in luncheon, eigars, and one or two other little matters, a half-dollar had been expended in the morning; so that on the third day, three dollars more were 'put through.' During this time, for marketing, shoes for as you say for one year; and if you bring down the cost to a large family, six dollars melted from the hands of money matters to your care ever after. Mr. Hall

On the evening after the ride, Mr Hall took out his nocket-book and counted his money. To his astonishment, and almost dismay, he found he had only about twenty-three and-a-half. He counted it over and over again, but could not make it a cent more. Three days before he had forty dollars! Where could sixteen and a half dollars have flown to? He had never spent it—he knew he had'nt-his wife must have made a nocturnal descent upon his breeches-pocket, unbeknown to himhe would ask her—he did ask her.

'Harriet, have you taken any money from my pocket-

How else could it have disappeared? 'Some one must have given me the wrong change. I gave William the carriage driver, a five dollar bill. Let ne see. It was a note, and I took it for three dollars; and again he ran over the little roll of bills in his pocketbook. 'Yes here's a three dollar bill; he gave me the right change,' Mr Hall's mind was in great perplexityhis income was small enough compared to his expenses and, therefore to lose eight or ten dollars, he felt to be

The items were soon summed up, and the product was found to be nearly two dollars and a half. "Which reduces it to five dollars and a half," re-parked Mrs. Hall. 'So it does,' exclaimed the husband, who began to nistrust how the cat would eventually jump. How money does slip through one's fingers! I can hardly believe it! But where is the balance? Where are the five dollars and a half? Even that is too much to lose, Let me see.'

He thought a moment, and then springing to his feet with as much energy as if he had discovered the secret of perpetual motion, he said :

'Yes! That's it! Razors and blacking-brushes!-Suddle-chops and Brooms! I paid my barber's and port-wine-sangaree, twelve and a half cents more; and my boot-black's bills, which, when added together, shall misst on one thing, and that is that you get a excites an eager interest on both sides of the great pond, make just five dollars and a half. 'Sixty dollars! It does not cost half that sum.' Reckon it up for yourself, then. Why, a shilling a day, for lunch, amounts to thirty-seven dollars a vear.

If I don't bring it down three hundred dollars. I am mistaken,' replied Mrs Hall, in a confident tone, for light had suddenly broken into her mind. The account which her husband had given of three days' dispensation of money showed where the main leak was.

Here are twenty dollars to begin with-all that I three dollars and-a-half for my tobacco and cigars, during the next three months. When it is gone, I will borrow as much as you want to carry you on until I can draw more money.'

After reciprohree months' salary, in order to pay it back again.

By extra exertions, and a system of almost pinching conomy, Mrs. H. managed, during the second quarter, pay the rent and a few small bills, and got through without asking her husband for a cent more; so that when the salary became due agam, she had a much larger sum to start with. From that time, not even a baker's bill was permitted to accumulate; and even her milk-bill was settled once a week.

Mr. H. sometimes complained a little at his wife's 'short commons,' as he called them, and at being out off from all pleasure-taking; but she consoled him, by $750 in change, in the bargain .- N. Y. Amer. Repub. telling him, good-humoredly, to wait awhile-that bet-

AN ADROIT TRICK .- A lady elegantly and fashion ably dressed, of prepossessing appearance and manners, topped in a coach at one of the fashionable stores at this season of bustle and business, to examine some cestly shawls. She was shown up stairs into the shawl room, where one of the partners of the firm attentively waited upon her. After examining and discarding a number, she selected one for $250. It was not exactly have left from my last quarter's salary-after keeping the article she wanted in color and finish; yet it came the nearest to what she required. She would call in at some of the other stores and if not better suited would take that shawl, which was laid aside for her. In about an half an hour her carriage drove up to the store again, and she went up stairs into the shawl room to take the article, not having been fortunate enough to suit book; but it was a month before his wife required a herself elsewhere; she would like, however, to go into an examination of the whole invoice, when, after some One of Mrs. Hall's acts was to buy blacking and time consumed in the inspection, she finally determined give it to the man; I gave it to humanity.

THE DEATH OF A CHILD. No one feels the death of a child as a mother feels it. Even the father cannot realize it thus. There is a vacancy in his home, and a heaviness at his heart; there is a chain of association that at times comes round with its broken link; there are memories of endearment, a keen sense of loss, a weeping over crushed hopes, and a pain of wounded affection. But the mother feels that one has been taken away who was still closer to her heart. Hers has been the office of constant ministration. Every gradation of Something in our favor, I think. In that case, you my friend, must be king, then what would become of my daughter? Your laws would compel you to repudiate her-the marriage would be annulled, and her happiness would be sacrificed. Cardinal Mastai Ferreti was elected Pope, June 16th 1846, and as sumed the title of Pius IX. He at once 1846, and assumed the title of Pius IX. He at once the character of the new censors, who had been select-claims to former respectability. His ragged co't, worn sugar with water, and pass it round to every one of the fastening on the inside of the ring-finger of the right Predecessor had pursued. He went through the stree ed from the ranks of literary men of known liberalty. Out shoes, and crownless hat, formed no exception to his children, who took a little as well as their father and hand.

on foot, which the five preceding popes had never done. The execution of law has been so satisfactory, that the other has been biliments. For his countenance—it was a round of mother. He would again at eleven o'ciock, at noon ents and information, and spent much time with them, the whole number of periodicals is now not far from which was deeper and more lasting than the rouge used jects of reform. He gave audience without the ordinary ceremonies, and appointed days on which the meanest subject could have free access to his person. Nor were acts, as to gain the unbounded confidence of his peothese mere tricks to gain popularity, but the fruit of an honest desire to be acquainted with the wants of his people, that he might relieve them. A common soldier brought to him a loof of miserable bread, and said it ty in Rome, in June, 1846, was 500; in July 340; in was a fair sample of their rations. SNAKE

We have already announced the death of Dr. Wainwright, of New York, occasioned by the bite of a ratt'e snake. The following particulars of his death, from the N. York Globe, possesses a thrilling interest:

"On Thursday afternoon, Dr. Wainwright received from a brother-in-law to Alabama, through one of our packets, a number of rare plants, &c .- the productions of that section of the Union-and, probably, for the purpose of furnishing a subject for more scientific experiments, a rattle-snake six feet long, was contained in the invoice.

MATTERS AT WASHINGTON.

Nothing has yet transpired in the doings of Congress worthy of special reports Theifollowing summary of the doings in both Houses during the past week is copied from the Lowell Journal:-

Resolutions of almost every kind have been introduced into Congress. In relation to Mr Calhoun's resolutions, we have the following:

Mr Calhoun called up his resolutions with a view of fixing a day for their consideration. A spirited debate ensued in consequence of a question put by Mr Allen. to ascertain whether Mr Calhoun intended to deny the right or propriety of taking territory for indemnity. Mr Calhoun replied that his objects were merely to guard against the result into which we were harrying ourselves inconsiderately-a result which might throw into our hands the whole nine or ten millions of Mexican people. After destroying their nationality Le thought it important was hould know before we went farther, what our true objec was in reference to the subjugation of territory. In the course of debate, Mr Cass stated that the Commit se an Military Affairs would soon be prepared to repart asbill to increase the army, which ought not to be impeded by the discussion of resolutions which seemed to him to have no partical bearing. Mr Allen moved to refer Mr Calhoun's resolutions to the Committee on Foregn Affairs, but withdrew the motion; and Tuesday the 4th of January was fixed for their consideration.

Among the resolutions proposed in the House on Mon was one by Mr Grinnell, enquiring whether the out at the trial. MECHANICAL AND DENTAL SURGERY. Mineral Teeth, with False Jaw and Gnms, of a tion Plates used, that will resist a weight of 16lsb. N preparing ardifical teeth for all sorts of mouths, a thousand difficulties arise, that but few are qualified to overcome. This is especially the case with whole and half sets. It is not only necessary that the plates on which the teeth are mounted have a perfect and easy lit, with a suction sufficiently powerful to confine them easy iit, with a suction sufficiently powerful to confine them to the jaw, without those troublesome appendages so commonly worn, the spiral springs; but the exact proportion of all the teeth and gums to be inserted, must correspond in every particular with those given us by nature: and to accomplish this in the ordinary way is wholly impossibly. As no definite rule can be haid down for the guitance of the manufacturer, of course, much will depend on the experience, ingenuity, and correct taste of the artist, in combining in the work all that is requisite for perfect substitute. By the loss of the natural teeth, the organs of specch are seriously affected, and will remain so, to a very considerable extent, until the prestoration of the dental sounds. This cannot be effected without restoring to the mouth the exact and precise amount it has lost. If the subspitting have more or loss in amount, the speech will be tart it, and mastication would be awkward in the extense. If the teeth have been removed by disease, and much of the dental ridge and jaw-by absorption, science must seek out a remedy and art must constit. This has been clare it, and mastication would be awkward in the extreme. If the teeth have been removed by disease, and much of the dental ridge and jaw-by absorption, science musiscek onta remedy, and art must apply it. This has been seached, su cessially done—the great desideration has been reached, andthe subject is no longer invested with doubt and particularly. All that is requisite, is found in the Carving work; where the artistinay contend even with nature for the mastery. In this new style of work, the whole substitute, jaw, gums, and teeth, are wrought from an imperishable mineral composition, with all the exact proportions or nature, with its life-like tints and shades.

The correctness of this theory must be obvious to all who will give the subject a moment's consideration. The addresses itself to, and is in accordance with, the dictates of common sense; and in no other way can a good set of teeth be got up, that will give entire satisfaction. Therefore the begot up, that will give entire satisfaction. Therefore many other advantages in this mode of preparing and setting artificial teeth, that can only be understood and imperciated by an examination of specimens that may be seen at the subscriber's office. They consist of whole and half sets, and a variety of cases of smaller magnitude, where much difficitly of execution is overcome.

In addition to the above, not less important to the community is that of filling teeth in a thorough and skilful manner. Probably not more than one dentist out of twenty-five, as we find them in city or country, is qualified for this part of his profession. In order to save a tooth by lifting, it is important that the dental cavity be properly prepared to receive a plug, and then filled by a particular precess, which is only known to but few; and if this be atteded to in season, before the exposure of the nerve, there can be not possible doubt of its saving the tooth for life—unparticular process, which is only known to but few; and if this be attended to is some extent approved by the Trade, at least so far as the Imitations lately introduced give evidence of their approbation of the only irue and perfect system which ENSURES TO BUYERS every description of every description of the constitutionally intended to its saving the tooth for life—unless it be constitutionally inhealthy. As there is so much inferior work in this branch of dentistry, pafined off by the community, so as to guard against inposition: they are few in number, and may become familiar to all.

A hacking cough constantly annoyed me! Boston, Mass., }

June 1st; 1844

Sir,—In February last, I took a sudden cold, after which a hacking cough constantly annoyed me, and this, combined with my other maladies, rendered me only miserable, as everybody told me that I was in a on sumption. Since, I have taken LORRAINE'S PILLS and now every body tells me that I am well;—I feel ac well as ever I did.

J. E. S. McKEY.

Portland, Me., Nov. 7th, 1843 Str. Please send us one gross of Lorraine's Pills, we have sold all we had last. They have given very good satisfaction, better than any other pills which we have in our market. I think in a short time they will take the place of others. We have had no fault found with them whatever; but, on the contra ry, they have been praised loudly. I think we ould have quite a number of highly respectable cer ificates from our citizens.

Respectfully yours, E. MASON.

'And do you read the newspaper before breakfast?' The landlord is own value. going to tear down the house and has given notice to plenty of houses in other streets?

Sure there are, sir, but they ask rent for them,

'And did you get a house without rent, girl?' Yes, sir, my dear father that's dead bought the little Mr Muggins, the grocer. He's dead and gone, and father never got a deed, and now his son wants the ground to build stores on. I wanted to ask you whether it wa law to do such a thing, but I didn't dare to.'

Your father, Betty, never paid for the house, I suppose, but held it subject to a mortgage which is now to be foreclosed. But don't take on about that, girl-if the interest was regularly paid you will have a handsome share of the proceeds. But the interest wasn't paid, sir. Mr Muggins was speculator, says our right is ontlawed and that we may to inquire for. This difficulty thus surmounted, before of thou must fight and kill thy enemies, thou art bound think ourselves well off that we have got our reat so long for nothing. It's cruel for such a family, and mother so poorly, to be turned out of house and home.'

Don't you fret, Betty; broil another mackerel, and see that the toast is just right, and I will look after this

"Think you, sir."

But, Betty, who was your father? 'He was a man that made boots and shoes, sir.' ·No, I mean what was his name—his Christian name. 'Oh! James Lewis, at your service.'

'And your grandfather ?' His name was Joshua. But it was written Levis-Joshua Levis, sir—in the big Bible.' Hem! indeed; well I shall look after the matter.

Go and get the mackerel.' Betty withdrew, and the profound genealogian ruminated on what might amount to a discovery.

Indeed, this meets the case. By the old titles it appears that a Joshua was the grandson of the rich Abram Lovis, and his family was supposed to be extinct .-Here it is; the name has been changed to Lewis, by a very common freak or accident. This is an important matter to Betty, but I will not break it to the girl at present.' So soliloquized the deep Mr. Langtree, till the revised breakfast had been duly swallowed, when a ring of his office bell announced the arrival of perhaps a client-an unusual circumstance. It was no other than young Christopher Muggins-the sole heir of Joseph Muggins, and the proprietor of the property which Betty's mother, with her seven children younger than Betty, had been warned to quit. The said warning had excited her neighbors against him, and he had come to ask what he considered the profoundest legal advice in a case of rather crooked title.

A very clear case and a straightforward proceeding, Mr. Muggins,' replied the venerable Langtree, after having listened to the voluble statement of the little Your right of enter upon the premises is unquestionable. These supient thoughts brought Muggins to the conclusion to strike while the iron-in his own mind-was 'Well, and what is that to cry about? Are there not hot. The girl was nobody but a hired cook, and she would jump at an offer from a thriving citizen of his standing. He was inexperienced in such negotiations, to be sure, but there must be a first time. Why should there be any more fuss in this case than in making any house in Mulberry street, where my mother lives, of old other bargain? Slight doubts and hesitancies were thus brushed away, and Muggins' resolution crystalized to the tense of forthwith.

> But here arose a difficulty. He did not even know the name of the lady. He would have to go by guess, and some confounded mistake might occur. He knew very well that Mr. Langtree had but two women servants, and it could not be likely that he would recomnend the housekeeper as marriageable, who was almost as old as himself, and seemed never to have been you mean to insult me, or are you in earnest? younger. He could not have meant her. It must be the cook, and if her name wasn't Levis, that would do dinner time Mr. Muggins rang the house hell, and was shown by the waiter to a little back-parlor or tea-room, and kill them in love. 'I wish to see Miss Levis, your cook that is,' said

Muggins to the boy. 'O, you mean Betty Lewis-she cooks here.

'Yes, just so, I had forgotten her name,' replied Muggins, not taking a seat nor looking at any thing in particular, but jerking about the room, as nervous as if he were putting a match to a Paixhan.

Betty directly made her appearance, a tidy and comey person, though as we have already hinted with eyes

Muggins was taken entirely aback. and Betty was little less surprised, insomuch that silence reigned for half minute at least. The hasty suitor at length broke silence, having deliberated much in the half minute. Why, Betty Lewis, I didn't think I would find you here!

·Where else could you find me? I have hardly been invwhere else for these five years '

'Sure I hadn't seen you, but I thought you must have one into the countryt You look just as you did when we used to have such fine times at the cotillon parties.' Yes, but times have changed since then. I suppose you have come to see about the house that mother is

'Never you mind, Miss Betty, it'll come right at last I've heard that you are related to the Levis family.'

'And what if we are? How does that help us to house? But it's new to me, only I know that grandfather's name was written Levis in the big Bible. But he made shoes for his living and so did my father till he couldn't get a living by it and died broken-hearted.' Muggins now thought he saw through the mill-stone so he replied, 'Don't distress yourself about the house a all, if its mine its yours, Miss Betty, I've come to say that'-and he seized her hand as with a steel vice. 'No. Mr Muggins. This is too sudden. Putting you vords and deeds together I cannot understand you. Why, as to deeds, Betty, I'll have a deed of the house made out to your mother and give it to her then

Well, perhaps I shall Perhaps! Why, how can you help it?'

'Yet excuse me, Mr Muggins, if I wait in suspense to

'I'll have it done to-night.' 'The coner the better.

'And when I've done it you'll say yes?' Let me see it done before I give any promises if you please, Mr Muggins,'

So they parted, for Muggins was a man of despatch The next thing was to go to his no ary and have the deed made out to Mrs Dorothy Lewis and her heirs and assigns forever. The next day it was duly signed, sealed and delivered, and made the family about as happy as their skins could hold. Now for the courtship. But we are sorry to inform the reader that it will never be written, and that there can be no marriage than there has been love in this tale -for as soon as Mr Langtree had been told by Betty of the delivery of the deed, he ascertained that the Joshua Levis who was in the line of geneological connection with brought upon the prisoner would serve as a warning to after, he very coolly informed him of that fact as a reas- | who heard him were inclined that way, he hoped they on why it would not be proper or profitable for him to would seek to regain the path of sobriety, which is the --- Chronotype.

An Unanswerable Argument against sincere repontance, and earnest and persevering prayor War.

BY H. C. WRIGHT.

About fifteen years ago, I was at a hotel in the city of partment of the government shall appoint. Providence, Rhode Island. In front of the hotel was a noble elm, and under its spreading branches scats were placed for the accommodation of the guests. Here I sa emphatically attered by the chief justice, and then the eresting, and I threw it down, and looked round for a more animated companion. Near me sat a very old man, in the garb of the religious Society of Friends, or word, hurriedly put on his cap, and almost rushed out Quakers. He sat cross-legged on his chair, his hands of the court room with the officers. When he got into erous offer of marriage, before she should know any locked together on his lap, his broad-brimmed hat on the street, he gave voice to his pent-up-rage in the most his head, and his countenance calm and serene. He ap- dreadfur oaths and unprecations against the judges, his peared to be lost in meditation. I looked at him for a family, mankind and the Almighty; and after he was noment, hesitating to interrupt him; but finally we entered into conversation, which turned upon the views of Friends on the subject of military defence. Thinking it would be easy to show the futility and absurdity of those views, I stated my arguments in favor of defensive resistance. He listened attentively, and then addressed me in nearly these words: Well friend, thou believest it right to kill thy enemics n self-defence ?'

'Assuredly I do.' Dost thou believe it to be thy dufy to love thy enemies?' ·Certainly I do.'

'Then,' said he, regarding me with a smile, 'if thou must fight thy enemies, I hope thou will fight them in What do you mean by that? I asked, sharply.

'In sober earnest,' replied the Friend, kindly but seriously, 'I never mean to insult any one. I repeat, that

'But suppose the country is invaded by the British or the Indians, shall I sit still and see our institutions destroyed, and our cities laid in ashes? No, I would go

'Yet thou must lay him a corpse at thy feet in love,' quietly interposed the Friend.

I felt annoyed at my inability to answer the old man, phatic pitch.

'What! Do you mean to say that I should allow an assassin to enter my house, to kill my wife and children, without making any resistance? No, I would plaster the wall with his brains, before I would suffer him to do so.' 'Friend,' said the old man, 'I hope thou wilt plaster the wall with his brains all in love.

'And I suppose, if I were the master of a merchant vessel at sea, and a pirate came down upon me, you would advise me not resist him. For my part, I think I should give him and his crew to the sharks.'

But,' said the old man, in a tone of unaltered kindness and secenity, 'thou must give them to be food for the sharks in love, for thou bast acknowledged it to be thy duty to love thy enemies. What could I reply? The old man had brought conviction to my mind. I reflected for a moment, and then said, Well, my good friend, you have convinced me that I must renounce either Christianity or military defence. I clearly see that swords and guns, battles and bloodshed, are inconsistent with Christian love.

HUNNEWELL SENTENCED TO DEATH. In the Supreme Court at East Cambridge, yesterday, George Hunnewell, convicted last week of burning his mother's house, was brought in for sentence. When asked if he had any thing to say why sentence should not be passed upon him, he remained mute, pressed his hands upon the rail of the dock, sat down, and rested his head near Somerville, a stone thrown by some malicious ner-upon his hands in such a manner as to conceal entirely his face. Chief Justice Shaw then addressed him upon the terrible circums ances of his crime, and the almos, infinite depravity of mind and heart which it indicated He had made the most cruel and dastardly attacks upon his mother's honor and peace. He had so long kept her in such a state of alarm and by his threats and violence, that she was, distressing as it must have been to a mother's feelings, compelled to procure his restraint by imprisonment, and his conduct when restored to liberty proyed that her fears were but too well founded. After familiarizing his mind with the atrocious idea, he carried into execution his cherished and most unhappy and manevolent revenge. The crowning act of his guilt was the destruction by fire of the sick and helpless brother,-That feeble and harmless brother was sacrificed to his malice, and his death was under the circumstances, mur-

A SABBATH ON THE FIVE POINTS.

A stroll through the Five Points, on a Sunday, is a something which should be practiced by every one who desires a knowledge of human nature. All classes and conditions are there to be seen, from the man of honor and affluence, to the thieving and drunken beggar. On one corner is a church, in which are decent persons worshipping, while on the opposite one is a groggery, filled with base men and women, blaspheming that name which is worshipped by the others. The "old brewery?' of notorious celebrity for rum and d struction. stands about the centre of the place, a kind of head quarters, with its many doors thrown open, inviting the base creatures who frequent the Points to spend the last farthing for the poisonous draught. In the interior of that building, poverty and misery are depicted in almost every countenance. Some twelve or fourteen families occupy the upper part, which is partitioned of in accordance with thy own views of duty, to fight them in small apartments, which are in many cases without doors or windows, and containing a poor emaciated woman, with several half starved and naked children around her, crying for bread. Pestilence is almost always there, It has not been many months since a woman, who was sick in that house, was fastened up in her room, because of delirium, and left to starve. Sha 'And suppose a robber meets me on the highway, and was found dead; and resting its head upon her cold and lifeless bosom, a child suffering the 1 st agony of starthe outrage! CORN COBS.

A friend who had read an article in some pup recommending corn cobs, ground or anground, as g stituting a valuable feed for stock, undertook to test-the truth of the statement for himself. He had a large quantity on hand, and having provided himself with a proper vessel-(a half-hogshead tub,) he filled it with cobs, and then with a solution of salt in water. In this steep the cobs were suffered to remain till they had imbibed a sufficiency of the fluid to render them soft. In this condition they were fed out to his stack-half a peck to a full grown cow or ox in the morning, and the same quantity at night. He remarks that all his animals are extremely fond of them, and that they consume a much less quantity of hay and grain than before he commenced giving them "cob feed." Neither do they re quire salt in its natural state. He has also ground seys eral bushels of cobs, and finds the meal an excellent article for making "mush." The most economical mode, however, of appropriating corn cobs, is to grind them with the corn. The corn should be first "crushed," in a mill constructed expressly for the purpose, and then ground into meal, the same as corn, when shelled .- Maine Cultivator.

It seems that the town then, as now, were unanimonsly opposed to crossing a Ferry; and it is to be presumed, after ten years' experience of its annoyances. To the Editor of the Danvers Courier: there will be no probability of a change of opinion.
